ANDREE'S CAMP DISCOVERED IN ARCTIC BY MEN SEEKING WATER, EXPLORER REVEALS

Two Harpooners Found Solution of Mystery 33 Years Old.

HORN REACHES PORT WITH BODIES OF PAIR

Death Blamed on Bitter Cold Rather Than on Lack of Food.

LEADER'S REMAINS HAVE HEAD SEVERED

Bones in Boat May Prove to Be Those of Third Victim of North.

(Associated Press.)
(Copyright, 1930, and All Rights Reserved in North and South America and Japan by the Associated Press.)

Associated Press, Aftenposten Boat Heimen at Skjaer Island, Norway (By Wireless), Sept. 1.—Dr. Gunnar Horn told the Associated Press today how two harpooners, seeking drinking water on bleak White Island stumbled on the grim solution to the mysterious disappearance 33 years ago of the Andree aerial polar expedition.

Leader of a Norwegian exploration mission, Dr. Horn reached this Arctic Ocean port today in his expedition ship Bratvaag with the bodies of Salomon August Andree and one of the two men with whom he set out to fly over the North Pole in a balloon.

When the Bratvaag reached White Island last month and dropped anchor among the icebergs under its bare stone mountains and its great white peak, walruses were seen disporting in the frigid seas and harpooners were at once put to work. Taking their catch ashore, the majority set about preparing the walruses for food and two were assigned to search out a stream of drinking water.

Tin Can Is First Clew.

These two walked along the great white silence until their eyes fell on a discarded tin can that seemed so foreign to the desolate landscape they looked farther and saw a brown mound. They investigated and found the mound to be a canvas boat, half-buried in the snow. In the boat was a boat hook. This they picked up and examined. On the shaft of the hook they read the inscription, "Andree Polar Expedition, 1896."

And so, awed and almost unbelieving, they knew that they had found the belated answer to one of the most spectacular riddles in all the history of exploration.

"It was with strange feelings," Dr. Horn said in a statement to the Associated Press and the Oslo Aftenposten today, "we stood on the beach where the brave Andree and his men 33 years ago ended their last polar wandering."

Bodies Are Found Near.

As soon as he was apprised of the harpooners' discovery Dr. Horn and the other officers of his expedition went to the place where the boat lay, a worn sledge beside it, and then they let their eyes circle about for what they must have both hoped and dreaded to find.

Their search was not long. Not many yards from the boat and sledge was found a body—if indeed a skeleton in the fur garb of an Arctic explorer may be called a body—laid between two mounds of earth and partly covered with small stones. So had the last rites been observed by the survivor or survivors for one member of that gallant crew.

And somewhat farther on, leaning against the mountain slope, feet buried in the snow, was a second clothed skeleton. It was headless, this one, and yet identifiable as Andree himself by a monogram on the jacket.

Few Bones in Boat.

In the boat were a few bones, but Dr. Horn and his fellow scientists were not able to determine whether they were human and represented all that was left of the third member of the expedition. He expressed the hope that study of the teeth of the whole skeleton would reveal whether it was the remains of Nils Strindberg of Knut Frankel.

All that they found, all the physical and material remnants of the expedition which set out from Spitzbergen in high hope so many years ago, were taken reverently to the Bratvaag. Last Tuesday an attempt was made to land on the island again for further search, but high waves prevented.

And so the Bratvaag turned back toward civilization. From its deck the last view of the frozen island which had held so grimly to its secret was

Horn Tells of Finding Andree Lying in Snow

Head of Arctic Expedition, in Own Story, Says Explorer Dead 33 Years Was Recognized by Monogram on Jacket.

By DR. GUNNAR HORN.

Chief of the Norwegian exploration expedition that found the bodies of Salomon August Andree and his companions of the aeronautical polar expedition of 1897.

Given exclusively to the Associated Press and the Oslo Aftenposten, this is Dr. Horn's first authorized statement about the discovery of the Andree expedition's last camp on White Island, Fridtjof Nansen Land. (Copyright 1930 and all rights reserved in North and South America and Japan by the Associated Press.)

Aboard Motor Ship Bratvaag, Skjaer Island, Norway, Sept. 1.—(By Wireless to the Associated Press).—The Norwegian expedition to Franz Josef's Land (now Fridtjof Nansen Land) in the summer of 1930 was made with the motor sealer Bratvaag of Aalesund. The skipper was Peder Eliassen.

It was planned that the vessel should at the same time hunt whales, seals and ice bears.

We sailed from Aalesund on July 29 and in marvelous weather we went northward along the coast to Tromsoe, where we arrived on the 30th of July in the morning. That evening we continued our voyage and by the next morning we were well out at sea past Soroya Island.

We made our course for Hopen, our first stopping place. We arrived there August 2. From there we proceeded to King Karls Land (Spitzbergen) and arrived on August 4 at Sable Island, which is the most Westerly part of King Karls Land.

Because of reports from a hunting expedition that had been North earlier this year, we knew that ice conditions were unusually favorable, and up to now we had not seen one floating iceberg.

Therefore we decided that en route to Franz Josef Land we could visit the islands between Spitzbergen and Horn, in Interview, Calls Embalming Out of Question.

THRILL OF ROMANCE FELT IN BOAT HOOK

Iron Branded With Words Asserting North Pole Was Goal.

DEAD CHIEF'S DIARY GLUED BY DAMPNESS

Balloon Crashed Because of Snow and Ice Weighting It, Is Belief.

By ODD ARNESEN.
Correspondent Aboard the Sealer Bratvaag for the Associated Press and the Oslo Newspaper, Aftenposten.
(Copyright, 1930, in North America, South America and Japan by the Associated Press.)

Aboard Motor Ship Bratvaag, Skjaer Island, Norway, Sept. 1 (by wireless to the Associated Press).—This story is being unfolded in the cabin of the distinguished Arctic explorer, Dr. Gunnar Horn, aboard the little sealer Bratvaag, which in the early hours today put in here to give the world the denouement of the mystery story surrounding the disappearance a generation ago of Salomon August Andree and two comrades after they set out from Spitzbergen in an attempt to fly across the North Pole.

Opposite me sits Horn—a bronzed adventurer, who has fought many dangerous battles with the storms of the farthest North and still lives to smile.

Words on Boat Hook Tell Goal.

In my hand is a boat hook found in the Andree camp. It is engraved with words which proudly proclaim that Andree's venture lay toward the then undiscovered North Pole.

One feels a queer sensation as he turns this historic boat hook in his hand. Your correspondent has seen many strange things in the frozen wastes of the North, but never before has he felt the thrill of romance which is engendered by this boat hook by the knowledge of the bodies lying above and the presence of the strong man of few words who sits opposite.

Dr. Horn told me that two bodies he found on White Island—those of Andree and supposedly of Nils Strindberg—had deteriorated in their long sleep in the ice until they were nothing but bones, although the clothing was fairly well preserved. More bones, which might be those of the third explorer, Knute Frankel, were found in the boat.

Embalming Out of Question.

"It is natural," said Dr. Horn, "that in the 33 years they have been exposed to thawing and freezing they should have been destroyed. The world has had too great expectations. There is no question of being able to embalm these bodies; they are too far gone.

"But I do believe that the bodies

JACK DIAMOND HELD BY GERMAN POLICE

Gangster, Ousted by Belgium, Seized at Aix; Accused of Murder in U. S.

FIRST TAKEN IN ANTWERP

Aix-la-Chapelle, Germany, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Detectives of the German secret service tonight arrested Jack (Lega) Diamond, American gangster, as he arrived at the frontier on a train from Antwerp after being expelled by Belgian authorities.

Police said extradition of Diamond to the United States for an alleged murder had been requested.

The prisoner took the arrest calmly, but was not disposed to talk. He was traveling under the name Jack Nolan.

The gangster was expelled from Belgium on the ground that he was an undesirable alien.

Since his passport had been visaed for entrance to Germany, the Belgian authorities brought him to the frontier.

Antwerp, Belgium, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Jack (Legs) Diamond was expelled from Belgium tonight, the police considering him undesirable.

The New York gangster was conveyed by a police guard to the German frontier and there released. He was granted a visa to visit Germany by the German consul before he left the United States. This climaxed a day of uncertainty for the American character whose journey toward Europe had greatly excited the Old World for a week.

This morning he landed here from the liner Belgenland and at first it appeared that he would have no trouble. Soon, however, a detectvie informed him that he would be detained until final word was obtained from the central authorities at Brussels, to whom the question had been referred because the Belgian police did not want to release Diamond until they made sure whether he was wanted by New York authorities.

He remained at the police station all day, but late this afternoon the authorities released him and he pre-

65 Heat Victims Taken to Hospitals During Avenue Pageant.

Sixty-six hospital cases of heat prostration marked the eighth and greatest of Washington's annual firemen's parades yesterday as more than 150,000 persons watched and cheered the column which flowed for 2 hours and 42 minutes in a steady stream of color, beauty, music, comedy and pathos past the reviewing stand at Pennsylvania avenue and Fourteenth street.

Sounding shrill above the jubilant siren tones of parading fire apparatus there was the almost constant scream of ambulance sirens as the hospital vehicles sped to the relief of spectators dropping unconscious along the line at the rate of one every 2 minutes and 29 seconds. Only two of those overcome, however, were paraders. All except one were treated at Emergency or Casualty Hospitals. They were Milford Roberts, of No. 3 Engine Company, and Samuel D. Myers, a fireman from Harrisburg, Pa.

As the parade started at the Peace Monument promptly at 11 o'clock the thermograph in the Weather Bureau's kiosk opposite the reviewing stand registered 98 degrees, but by an hour later it had soared to 102, where it remained throughout the parade, which ended at 1:42 o'clock.

Heading the line of march was Sergt. A. J. Bargagni, marshal of the parade, with a police escort, followed by the United States Navy Band, Commissioner Herbert B. Crosby and Assistant Engineer Commissioner Maj. D. A. Davidson, Chairman Odell S. Smith and Vice Chairman Rudolph Jose, of the citizens' parade committee, constituting the official escort for Gov. John Garland Pollard of Virginia and Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, who were guests of the District in the official reviewing stand.

The escorting party fell out of line at the stand, from which they watched the rest of the column.

As the last unit of the parade passed the stand a few minutes before 2 o'clock, a flicker of sadness seemed to modify the smiles with which Fire Chief George S. Watson and Sergt. Bargagni acknowledged the enthusiastic compliments of the two

OLD-AGE INSURANCE STUDIED BY HOOVER

President Understood to Be About to Name Group to Tackle Problem.

CLIMAX OF LONG WORK

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

President Hoover is understood to have another commission on the way this one to make a study of old age insurance.

He is not moving with a view to recommending any legislation on the subject or to making it a governmental proposal at all. Rather it is to be a study by insurance groups of the practicability of this line of insurance. He is simply sponsoring or initiating the study in the same manner that he recently launched a study by private individuals into home owning.

It is not known just when he will be ready to announce the personnel of the commission. It is probable that he would have done so before this, however, had the drought situation not intervened to command his attention.

It is a subject to which he has been giving considerable attention and quietly and without publicity he has been in communication with leaders of the country's insurance business. There is reason to believe that it was the subject uppermost in his mind until the drought problem developed.

This rather emphasizes a striking side of the President of which the public has not gotten a comprehensive picture. The impression has been that the governmental and political problems which were being heaped upon him were quite harassing. The press reflection of him in the past several months has surrounded him with governmental and political problems, with this and that caller at the White House throughout the day.

There is reason to believe, however, that what Mr. Hoover probably considers his most enduring work and commanding as much of his attention as anything else is that wholly unrelated to the Government and shaped in conferences in the evening with some dinner or overnight guest

PLANE MAKING GOOD SPEED ON NEW YORK HOP

Question Mark Expected to Reach Goal Late This Afternoon.

TAKE-OFF AT PARIS MADE AFTER DELAY

French Confident Fliers Will Be First to Execute Feat.

MAY CONTINUE WEST FOR PRIZE OF $25,000

Elaborate Reception Planned on Long Island; Broadcast to Be in Two Tongues.

(Associated Press.)

Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, two veteran French airmen flying a veteran plane named the Question Mark, were roaring swiftly over the Atlantic last night toward New York.

The fliers left Le Bourget Field, near Paris, at 4:54 o'clock yesterday morning (Eastern standard time), and as early as 6 o'clock, Eastern standard time, last night they were reported by the liner Bremen at latitude 48.30 north and longitude 32.00 west, or more than half way between Cape Race Newfoundland, and Fastnet Light, Ireland.

That placed them about 882 miles east and slightly north of Cape Race and 1,758 miles from New York. They had covered about 1,476 miles from Paris.

Other ships at sea reported the steady progres of the Question Mark, among them the Europa, the Rochambeau and the Ile de France.

Storm Message Erroneous.

At one time a slight flurry was caused by a message which the Ile de France intercepted from the Rochambeau. It said that at 2:20 p. m., Eastern standard time, Coste had been caught betwen two storms and was turning north.

A little later the Rochambeau sent in a message saying that Coste merely had been caught between two cloudbanks and intended to veer slightly north, but apparently his progress was not impeded.

Far out over the Atlantic Ocean tonight, winging toward America, Capt. Coste and his flying companion, Maurice Bellonte, in the famous Question Mark, sped along the lower edge of the Great Circle to repay the visit of the Lone Eagle in 1927, Charles A. Lindbergh.

Carry Hopes of Frenchmen.

The valiant Frenchmen bore with them as they raced through the darkness the hopes of millions of French people who prayed for their success and believed they would complete without disaster the westward voyage on which Coli and Nungesser went to their untold fate two weeks before the Lindbergh flight.

Steamships' wireless operators were alert for messages from the radio-equipped plane which took off at 4:54 a. m. (E. S. T.), from Le Bourget, passing over Ireland some five hours later and was lost to sight in the heavy skies beyond Valentia, projecting far into the Atlantic on the northern point at the mouth of the River Shannon, which evidently the birdmen had followed from Limerick. Before nightfall two liners had been in contact with the fliers, the Ile de France and St. Therese.

In France tonight there was supreme confidence that tomorrow evening at the appointed hour, just as the dauntless Lindbergh kept to his schedule, Coste and Bellonte would sweep down to receive the welcome

CRASH, NEW MARKS CONCLUDE AIR RACES

MRS. O'DONNELL STARS

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Capt. Arthur Page, Marine Corps flier, who crashed in the Thompson trophy event at the national air races today, died tonight at a hospital here.

Curtiss-Reynolds Airport, Chicago, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The 1930 national air races wound up tonight with a crash and possible fatal injury of a famous pilot, a claimed altitude record and the fastest speed ever attained at a meet of its kind.

The classic of the competitions—the 100-mile Thompson trophy race—brought victory to Charles "Speed" Holman, of Minneapolis, and disaster to Capt. Arthur Page, of the United States Marine Corps. More than 60,000 spectators saw Page cut out of the race while skimming in front of the stand at more than 207 miles an hour, waver across the field and plunge to earth.

In three more 5-mile laps he probably would have won the race. Tonight he was in a serious condition in an Evanston (Ill.) hospital with possible internal injuries and fractured jaw, a fractured leg and three broken ribs. Capt. Page is stationed at Quantico, Va.

Holman had only James Haizlip, of St. Louis, to contend with in the race after Page's crash, for Capt.

NATS TAKE DOUBLE VICTORY FROM SOX

Cronin and Brown Heroes of 2-1 and 6-3 Wins Before 20,000.

MACKS DIVIDE BILL

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

Twenty thousand or more fans decided to spend part of their Labor Day holiday at Griffith Stadium and they certainly got their money's worth, for two of the most exciting games played here this season were staged. Although the Red Sox are in the cellar, as usual they gave the Johnsons plenty of opposition, but all they drew from their day's work was a double defeat, 2 to 1 and 6 to 3.

As the Yankees and world's champion Athletics broke even in their twin bill, the Nationals gained a full game on both, pulling to within 6½ games of the league leaders and stretching their second-place margin over the New Yorkers to 7½ contests.

At one time or other during the afternoon, practically every one of the Nationals jumped into the limelight. "General" Alvin Crowder hurled a masterly game in winning the opener, aided by the bats of Hayes, Rice, Harris and Spencer, while Harris started two of the three Nat rallies in the second game, with Hayes and Cronin contributing some nobby fielding bits.

The outstanding heroes of the day, however, were Shortstop Joe Cronin and Pitcher Lloyd Brown, the former making his presence felt in both contests, while Brown practically won

Mrs. Eddie Cantor Robbed Of Gems in Atlantic City

Theft of $20,000 in Jewels From Comedian's Hotel Suite While Police Fill Building Spurs Efforts to Break Up Bold Ring.

Atlantic City, Sept. 1 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The second big jewelry robbery within two days, and the sixth this summer, has galvanized police of this city into frantic efforts to break up what they believe is a ring of expert jewel thieves. New York and Philadelphia detectives have been called in to solve a series of robberies in which $250,000 worth of gems has disappeared without one piece being recovered.

Mrs. Eddie Cantor, wife of the comedian, was the latest victim. Jewels, which she valued at $20,000 were stolen Sunday night from her room at the Ambassador Hotel. The theft was perpetrated boldly while the hotel was full of detectives and insurance company representatives in connection with the $75,000 worth of jewels stolen from Mrs. John Edward Johnston, of Baltimore, only the night before.

The theft of the Cantor jewels apparently took place between 8 o'clock last night and 12:30 this morning. Mrs. Cantor spent those hours with her husband, who made his last appearance in a vaudeville skit before starting a new picture. About 1 o'clock they returned to their room on the ninth floor and Mrs. Cantor found her jewelry missing from the bureau drawer where she kept it. The stolen articles include three diamond bracelets a pendant and her wedding ring.

Police promptly fingerprinted the premises, as they had the room of the Johnstons the night before. They believe a master key was used in

Calvin Coolidge

Says: Another school year is opening. Over twenty-seven million scholars will be enrolled. To this great throng will be added more than eight hundred thousand college students. The teaching force reaches toward a million. Education is a great business enterprise requiring an expenditure of well over two billion dollars each year. This will soon be felt in many avenues of trade.

While it is easy to waste money on education it is the one thing which we can not afford to curtail. The true ideal would seem to be a system that supplies those in the lower grades with certain basic information and those in the upper grades with the power to think.

Under the modern tendency education covers many subjects. This method subjects the student to the danger of being only superficial and not having a thorough knowledge of any subject.

The school is not the end but only the beginning of an education. Yet its place can not be filled in any other way. The best thing the millions of our youth can do to assure their future success is to work faithfully at their studies. That opportunity for improvement and discipline will never return.

Inquest Due Today in Fall Of Child in Elevator Shaft

Jackie Williams, 5, Missing Since Early Morning Yesterday, Found by Policeman; Dies Shortly After Being Taken to Hospital.

Coroner J. Ramsey Nevitt has ordered an inquest for 11:30 o'clock this morning inquiring into the death yesterday of Jackie Williams, 5-year-old adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Williams, of 724 Third street northwest, who was found lying in an elevator shaft of the apartment where the parents live, after a general lookout had been sent out by police for the child who had been missing since 8 o'clock yesterday morning.

Private L. Collins, attached to the Sixth Precinct, found the child when he looked into the shaft yesterday afternoon. Both Mrs. Williams and a neighbor declared they had looked in the same place earlier in the day, but had been unable to see anything.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where it was found that he had two skull fractures and other injuries attributed to the fall into the shaft. He died at 4:30 in the afternoon.

The child's foster-father is a dining car steward on the Norfolk & Western Railway and did not know of the accident until his return from work yesterday afternoon.

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

Appears on Page 20 Today.

New York so well knows how to accord heroes.

Takeoff Is Delayed.

Coste, cool and calculating, had awaited the moment when he would be favored by that rare combination of wind and sky that spells perfect flying weather over the North Atlantic. Today these conditions were approximated, although it was gloomy at home.

The fliers knew what kind of weather they wanted and they waited for it.

Late yesterday Coste made it known the weather report was so good and held such promise for at least 48 hours that he had decided to start about dawn. When the morning broke, however, it was seen that conditions over Le Bourget Field were so bad a safe take-off under heavy load seemed impossible.

Coste decided to wait, although every moment of delay cut down the precious hours of daylight for his arrival on the other side of the Atlantic. After midforenoon conditions improved so rapidly that a take-off was possible.

Wife Bids Farewell.

The ace who in war chalked up his quota of enemy aircraft without turning a hair saw his advantage. He bade a farewell to Mme. Coste, hopped into the cockpit of the Question Mark, and, with a smile started the powerful motors whirring. Fifteen minutes later he had made a take-off as smooth and effortless as Le Bourget ever saw.

Ten more minutes elapsed while the huge plane winged its way to the horizon and vanished in the west. As the mists closed about the ship, Mme. Coste stood still, staring at the distant empty sky, waved a faltering "bon voyage," and turned away.

Coste estimated his flight to New York City would require 35 hours.

Tonight, to the joy of all France, weather conditions remained favorable for westward flying. The meteorological bureau at Le Bourget said there was not the slightest concern about immediate conditions, and every pilot knew that the plane would find its objective.

$25,000 Prize Open.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 1 (A.P.).—A prize of $25,000 awaits Capt. Dieudonne Coste and his navigator, Maurice Bellonte, if they succeed in their transatlantic flight to New York and then hop on to Dallas.

Col. William E. Easterwood, of Dallas, recently contracted with the fliers to pay them $25,000 for a successful Paris-New York-Dallas flight.

St. Johns, Newfoundland, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Dieudonne Coste was in communication with the Louisburg (Nova Scotia) radio station at 8:15 p. m. (Eastern standard time). No position was given at that time. Cape Race had so far failed to get in touch with the plane.

Plan Elaborate Reception.

New York, Sept. 1 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Preparations were completed today at the Curtiss-Wright Airport at Valley Stream, Long Island, for the arrival of Dieudonne Coste, according to W. L. Avery, manager of the airport. Mr. Avery said that Coste, if he succeeds in the attempt which has taken the lives of several other flyers, should arrive at the airport some time tomorrow afternoon.

The floodlights at the field will be turned on at dark tomorrow night, if Coste has not arrived before then. Arrangements have been made to handle a crowd of any size, and telegraph instruments and additional telephones have been installed at the field to take care of the large number of newspapermen who are expected to report the arrival.

An account of the landing will be broadcast in the United States by a coast-to-coast network of stations and will be rebroadcast in France by French stations.

Leader in War and Peace.

This binational reception means that descriptions will have to be made in both English and French. Eleanor Smith, aviatrix, and Kurt Peterson, a regular radio announcer, will describe the landing in English, while Kelvin Keech, national broadcasting announcer, and Rene Recover, Coste's personal manager here, who will introduce the fliers, will broadcast in French. The aviators, so far as is known, do not speak English.

Strung along the North Atlantic steamship lanes, approximately in the path of the fliers, are 39 passenger liners and about 100 freight ships.

Capt. Dieudonne Coste is one of modern avaition's double aces—reaching the top in both war and peace.

In the World War he brought down five enemy planes and seven balloons. His heroism brought him world-wide fame because he started establishing a long series of peace-time records.

Inspired by Bleriot.

Since the war he has set endurance, long distance, pioneering, load and other records, including a flight around the world. He started yesterday on an attempt to accomplish a feat that has not yet been achieved, although ten lives have been lost in attempts to do it, and two other planes have fallen far short of the mark.

He has been flying since he was 17 years old. It was the unprecedented accomplishment of a fellow countryman, Louis Bleriot, in crossing the English Channel in 1909 that started Coste as an engineering student into an aviation career. He won his pilot's license in less than a year after Bleriot flew across the little strip of water that had been conquered by swimmers before lighter-than-air craft created a greater sensation by skimming over it.

His daring and restlessness have always been tempered and controlled by cool calculation. Many of his take-offs have been cloaked in mystery, in keeping with the name of his plane, but the mystery has been only on the exterior, for every available scientific precaution had been taken in advance to insure the success of each attempt.

M. Jules Henry, charge d'affaires of the French Embassy, left Washington for New York last night to greet Capt. Dieudonne Coste and his navigator, Maurice Bellonte, upon their arrival at the metropolis.

pared to follow his original plan of remaining in Belgium a few days and then going to a French or German health resort. A little later they reconsidered and decided to escort him to Germany since his passport had been visaed for entrance to that country.

Diamond had stated he wished to go either to Vichy, France, or Magdeburg, Germany. His passports were visaed by both the German and French consuls in New York, the latter bearing the date of August 13.

Diamond said he was ill with a stomach trouble and may eventually have to undergo an operation, in which case he intended to go to Germany to consult specialists.

The traveler had been expected to go ashore at Southampton or Cherbourg but turned up unexpectedly here.

MANY U.S. EMPLOYES PUT ON RETIRED LIST

Among Them Is Jas. Ware, 91, in War Bureau Service 57 Years.

ALL HAVE PASSED 74

More than a score of War Department employes, all beyond 74 years of age, have been transferred to the civil service retired list in accordance with congressional legislation, it was learned yesterday. The majority of them are in field service outside the Capital.

In the group is James Ware, said to be the oldest employe of the Government in active service, who for the last 57 years has been superintendent of construction and repair work at Forts Monroe and Wool, at the entrance of Chesapeake Bay. He is 91 years old.

The list also includes in the War Department proper Jacob Frech, former chief clerk of the adjutant's office, 87 years old, and with a record of 69 years service; William R. Blackiston, 77 years old, also of the adjutant general's office; James H. Bessling, surgeon general's office, 77 years old; Edward M. Douglas, office of chief of engineers, 75 year old; Samuel Bryant, surgeon general' office, age 75, and William Haller and George S. Britt, of the adjutant general's office, each 74.

Two employes of the State Department have been affected by the retirement law. They are Henry Lewis Bryan, editor of the laws, and John Stephen Martin, principal translator. Both have given long and important service to the Government.

MRS. EDDIE CANTOR VICTIM OF THIEVES

the theft. There was no evidence of the lock having been forced, and nothing else in the room was disturbed.

In the case of the Johnstons the same procedure was followed by the thieves, who, however, overlooked or rejected jewels to the value of $17,000 besides the $75,000 worth they took. The couple arrived at the Ambassador Saturday afternoon, and the robbery occurred that same night, likewise between the hours of 8 and 12.

Not only have there been two thefts over the Labor Day week-end but on August 1 Mrs. Ruth Burry, of Cleveland, Ohio, was robbed of $55,000 worth of jewels while she and her two children were on the beach. And on July 5 two New York women who were said to be socially prominent and whose names police refused to reveal lost $80,000 worth of jewels after they had started an informal acquaintance with two good-looking young men on the beach. A dinner invitation followed, then a round of night clubs, and still later the men were invited to the women's rooms. After they had left, the matrons discovered their jewels had gone with them.

Police believe there have been still more robberies of this sort that were never reported because the women did not want thir husbands to know of their flirtations. They pointed out that the jewel thieves selected their victims carefully, picking only people with valuable jewels, and that in the case of the two New York women at least they were men of smooth and courteous manners.

to whom the public or press pays no particular attention.

It is seldom that there are not several White House dinner guests the names of whom would fill a business, scientific or professional Who's Who. Generally they are looked upon as more or less social occasions and reference to them is usually carried as society news.

Companies May Be Ready.

It is devoloping, however, that it is from these gatherings that such studies as those relating to child life, home building and old age insurance are emerging. Certainly they come under and seem to trend toward fulfillment of Mr. Hoover's "universal happiness" promise of his campaign.

He takes readily to undertakings of this kind, too, much easier than he does to political problems.

It so happens that probably all the insurance companies need is a leadership to embark them upon a development of old age insurance. With the rapid economic readjustment through which the country is going, whereby machinery is displacing man and creating unemployment, a general scheme of old age insurance has long been talked of as an economic necessity.

Of course, one can get pretty much any kind of insurance he wants now. But by the term old age insurance is meant some general scheme available to the mass of wage earners whose means of livelihood is being cut off at increasingly early ages.

Bay State's Initiative.

Massachusetts has embarked upon a plan of old-age State pensions, or rather legislation has been enacted toward that end.

At the last session of the State assembly the Republicans succeeded in enacting a plan to take effect next year after the Democrats had been hammering away at the subject for years. This is the way the Republicans do, take the Democrats' ideas.

But before the legislation really becomes effective there must be some means agreed upon of raising the revenue. No provision for such was embraced in the penions legislation. This revenue raising is to be a problem for the next assembly and, it is understood, quite a controversial and quarrelsome one. So conflicting and numerous are the plans advanced, in fact, that it is conceivable that the actual working of the pensions system may be held up.

Of course, Mr. Hoover is not contemplating any Federal old-age pensions plan, but then there is no telling what an exhaustive study may reveal to be the country's needs and what may come of it as a result.

AMERICAN WOMAN RELEASED BY CUBA

Charges of Spying Which Were Laid Against Mrs. Morlotte Are Dropped.

IS RETURNING TO U. S.

Havana, Cuba, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Mrs. Martha Lane Morlotte, 20-year-old American woman, who for 72 hours was detained by military authorities in connection with an alleged treason plot, left by airplane for Miami, Fla., en route to New York, at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon.

RULE FOR AD

Mrs. Morlotte, American widow of a Cuban aviation officer, was released by the authorities today after investigation of charges against her of spying had been investigated. Mrs. Marlotte, arrested Saturday just before her intended departure for Long Meadow, Mass., to visit her father, had been held in a prison cell at Marianao, where she had been on a hunger strike.

Newark, Ohio, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Senora Martha Lane Marlotte, held in jail in Havana, Cuba, charged with espionage, is a native of Newark and a member of a prominent family here.

She was formerly Martha Lane. Mrs. W. J. Fitzgibbon, an aunt, today said she knew nothing of the affair other than what she had read in news dispatches. "Of course, we look upon the charge as perfectly ridiculous," she said.

Senora Morlotte met the Cuban air officer on a train while returning home from an Eastern school, Mrs. Fitzgibbon said. They were married after a short courtship.

Blow From Auto Kills Baltimorean

Agriculture Department Employe Operator of Car Figuring in Fatality.

An unidentified middle-aged white man died at St. Agnes' Hospital, in Baltimore, last night from injuries received early yesterday when he was struck by an automobile said to have been driven by Fred Hartley, an employe of the Department of Agriculture.

The pedestrian was run down on the Baltimore boulevard near Summit avenue shortly after 10 a. m. Mr. Hartley placed the man in his car and rushed him to the hospital, where he subsequently died of a fractured skull and internal injuries.

The body was taken to the morgue at Baltimore. It had not been identified last night.

DRY AGENT COLLEGE OPENS THIS MORNIN

CARE TO BE STRESSED

Rights of individuals under the fourth and fifth amendments to the Constitution, with Supreme Court interpretations as the guiding feature, is the first thing scheduled to be taught to the picked squad of prohibition agents at the formal opening of the college this morning.

The initial classes will open at 9 a. m. Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, director of prohibition, will deliver the first lecture.

It was announced that the college will differ from the program originally formulated by the Treasury, whereby agents were brought to Washington for three weeks of instruction. Study in this college is to be intensive and practical, with a fundamental grounding in the law.

Besides the 24 agents, who will become instructors under supervision of headquarters here instead of administrators, there will be seven field inspectors. This will mean a class of 31 for the four weks of study. All agents attending the school will receive their salaries and expenses while in Washington.

At the outset of their course, the future instructors will be carefully drilled in "probable cause." In this way the Bureau of Prohibition hopes to eliminate arrests that will not stand the test of court trials and stop the haphazard searching of places and individuals.

CONNALLY BLAMES DISTRESS ON G. O. P.

Texan Pictures Agriculture as Suffering; Lays Stock Crash to Party.

HITS FAILURE TO WARN

(Associated Press.)

Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, in a radio speech last night asked the voters of the Nation to turn out Republicans who have failed to keep their pledges and elect Democrats. He said Republican leaders were claiming "farm relief" and the "tariff" as their achievements.

"Agriculture," he declared, "is in unutterably greater distress than a year ago. American commerce, trade and industry have sunken and shriveled under the operation of the tariff. An army of idle men, larger than any that has tramped the highways for years, is walking the streets."

Republican campaign directors, Mr. Connally asserted, are trying to fix the blame for present conditions on the Democrats. Senator Fess, chairman of the Republican national committee, and Robert H. Lucas, his executive director, charge the Democrats with not aiding the President and Republicans in corrective measures.

Statements Are Challenged.

"I challenge the truth of this charge," Mr. Connally said. "What corrective measures have the Democrats opposed? What measure has the Republican administration proposed to correct the disaster which its folly has produced? It has had none and it has none now."

Mr. Connally declared that the Republicans had a new chairman to take the place of Claudius H. Huston, the President's personal selection, who was cashiered on the field of battle, but it was the same old organization. He criticized the administration for not warning the people against the speculative market, then called the Hoover market, before the crash that ruined so many.

"At no time," he added, "did the Department of Commerce or the Treasury or the administration issue a word of warning. These departments—widely heralded as in touch with business, with accurate knowledge of conditions and values—by their optimistic and buoyant predictions actually contributed to the staggering disaster."

Farm Relief "Faulty."

The Farm Board is perhaps doing its best, Mr. Connally conceded, but the "system is a faulty one."

"Republican policies, which pretend to give the farmer relief with one hand and with the other relieve him of much more, and hand it over to the pampered interests, are the cause of the failure of farm relief," he explained.

"The Hawley-Smoot tariff act should never have been conceived. It is a measure that picks the farmer's pockets while it pretends to aid him, a pious political fraud. It has been estimated that it will cost the consumers $1,000,000,000 in the increased cost of living.

"The billion dollars has not gone to the farmers, nor to the laboring man. Where will it go? To increase the dividends and profits of powerful interests with political influence and alliances.

"During the first six months of 1930 our exports shrunk more than $500,000,000. Exports dropped 21 per cent and imports 24 per cent. The answer is perfectly simple. If the other nations of the world can not sell us goods, they can not buy our goods."

"Fools Rush In Where Angels Fear to Tread"

People who invest their money in questionable stocks, bonds or real estate are, of course, not really fools. They are just inexperienced, usually unwarned, individuals. But so often they "rush in" and part with their money where a little caution, a slight delay to get the facts first, would have prevented loss.

There is no hurry necessary when you desire to soundly invest your money. When security promoters and salespeople urge you to sign up right away, attempt to rush you into their proposition—those attempts may be merely efforts to prevent your making a sound investigation.

Sound, experienced investors will not "rush" into security ventures. They demand facts first and then take the time to verify. They "check and double check" and they prevent unnecessary risk and unnecessary loss.

RIVAL GOVERNMENT IS SET UP IN CHINA

Nationalist Faction Puts Seven on State Council in Peiping.

MANCHURIA IS WATCHED

Peiping, China, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The disaffected Kuomintang faction opposing President Chiang Kai Shek's Nationalist regime today set up a rival national government here with a state council of seven chieftains.

The leader is Gen. Yen Shi-Shan, who has been one of the leaders of the northern coalition's civil war against Chiang. The others are Tang-shaoyi, who was first premier of the republic Wang-Ching-Wei, Kuomintang left-wing leader; Feng Yu-Hsiang, Christian general; Chang Hsueh Liang, governor of Manchuria; Liu-Sung-Jen, leader of the Kwangsi military clique, and Hsieh Chih, of the Kuomintang right wing.

Whether the Kuomintang malcontents will carry out their plans successfully depends largely on the attitude of Gen. Chang Hsueh-Liang, whose participation is considered doubtful in well-informed quarters here.

The announcement of the forming of the new government coincides with strong rumors that the Manchurian governor, whose support both sides claim to have won, had decided to intervene in the civil war on Nanking's side. Such a step would make the Northern military cause hopeless.

The move to organize a separatist government was brought about chiefly by Wang-Ching-Weo, a veteran revolutionary, regarded by many as the logical successor to Sun Yet Sen, late Provisional President of the Chinese Republic, in the hope of gaining political power for the Kuomintang left wing and for consolidating anti-Chiang-Kai-Shek factions.

One Dead, Five Hu In Virginia Crash

Red Hill Man's Auto and Car From Capital in Collision.

Gordonsville, Va., Sept. 1.—Joseph Vanderhoof, 25, of Red Hill, Va., was kille and Misses Mary and Evelyn Hankla, of Louisa, Va., are in the University Hospital, Charlottesville, the former with a probable fracture of the skull, as the result of a motor accodent on the Jefferson highway tonight at the intersection of the James Madison and Jefferson highways, about 5 miles south of Gordonsville.

Vanderhoof, with the Misses Hankla and John Helvin, also of Louisa, was en route to Charlottesville, when his car was sideswiped, witnesses say, by a car coming from the direction of Gordonsville in which were S. F. Gallehom and L. B. Perkins, both of Marion, who were returning from Washington, D. C.

Employes and bystanders at the service station righted the car and extracted the injured. The windshield pierced young Vanderhoof's skull, completely scalping him. After beeing freed from the wreckage he walked a distance of 30 or 40 yards before collapsing, dying a few minutes later without having regained consciousness. Occupants of the Marion car were uninjured.

HORN TELLS OF DISCOVERY

These are Stor Island, White Island and Victoria Island.

So we continued, and early on the morning of August 5 we glimpsed a great island's white peak through the fog. We discovered that the map for this region is incorrect, as this island lies about 12 miles farther to the West than on the British admiralty map, and that the mapping done by the Worsley-Algarsson expedition in 1925 is quite correct.

We first landed on the southeast side of the island, where the coast is quite bare. After that we were on the northeast side, where there is a great expanse of bare flat land.

Just on the beach there is a pole that marks the spot where a depot was established by the Italians in 1928 for Nobile and Roald Amundsen. Besides this depot we erected a hut that we had with us.

It is good to have a hut on this Godforsaken place in case some ill-fated expedition should seek refuge there.

At 5 o'clock we weighed anchor and sailed eastward in ice-free waters. At the outset we were followed by our old friend fog, but it soon disappeared, and then we caught sight of the big white peak on White Island.

This island—Giles Land as it is also called—is known to be one of the most unapproachable islands in the whole of the Spitzbergen region, and here we were going full speed toward it in ice-free waters.

We certainly were lucky, and our joy was great over the possibility of being able to land so easily at this rarely visited place. Little did we imagine then that our visit would lead to the final explanation of one of the most tragic and mysterious happenings in the history of polar exploration.

We came up under a bare flat land on the southwest side of the island. White Island's position also is incorrectly marked on the maps, too far east.

It was quite still and there was a burning sun as we came to land. Very carefully Skipper Eliasen maneuvered his vessel in through innumerable projections of land. Fortunately some stranded icebergs showed us where most of the dangerous projections were located.

The skipper dropped anchor and members of the expedition went ashore. These were the botanist, Olaf Hanssen, the zoologist, Adolf Sorensen, and myself as leader of the expedition.

On our way into the beach we saw a school of walrus playing about in the sea, and the outlook for a good catch helped to put us in a good humor.

One Lake Is Seen.

We landed and were soon on our way inland across the naked island. On it were mountains of granite and gheis. Between them were stretches of gravel and sand. Only a shallow little lake broke the tediousness of the landscape.

Brown moss made a little spot of color here and there. Otherwise vegetation was very sparse. There were the usual polar flowers about. We worked through the evening in the northwest part of the flat land and went on board again in the early morning.

On August 6 we had the same marvelous weather, with brilliant sunshine and a cloudless sky. The ocean was like a mirror and on many jutting peninsulas round about were stranded icebergs.

Intense Silence Reigns.

White Island's great ice peak rose majestically from the low coast land, everywhere reigned an intense silence. Just once in a while we could hear the noise of ice breaking away from parent icebergs and splashing into the sea.

In truth there was a great white silence everywhere and it was impossible not to feel a little affected by such a deathlike stillness. The noise of the falling ice emphasized the depth of the silence.

In the morning the Bratvaag's two hunting boats, under the leadership of the shooters, old Myklebust and Severin Skjelten, went out to harpoon walruses; ultimately Skjelten and the harpooners, Karl Tusvik, Olaf Salen, John Almestad and Sigurd Myklebust, went ashore to skin their catch.

Mound of Snow Found.

Salen and Tusvik went to search for drinking water and discovered a little stream. Beside the stream they found a mound of snow that was rather dark and did not resemble the ordinary snow hill. They went over to it at once and saw a boat sticking up from the snow.

In the boat they caught sight of the point of a boatswain's hook, with a name engraved on it. The two men at once ran back to Skjelten and told him about their find, showing him the hook.

On it was engraved "Andree's Polar Expedition, 1896." Skjelten, Almstad and Myklebust then went to the mound and in the boat they further found a book, which they took with them to the beach.

At this moment the Bratvaag's motor boat with Skiper Eliassen and Assistant Mechanic Exornaesvaag aboard, arrived to help the hunters with their walrus catch.

Skipper Pushes Search.

Eliassen was immediately informed about the discovery and he went on alone to investigate it further. Against the wall of a neighboring mountain he found a body leaning against the mountain slope with its feet half buried in snow.

Eliassen realized at once that this must be the remains of the Andree expedition. He immediately returned to the Bratvaag, where I was. He showed me the book and I saw immediately that it was the Andree expedition's observation book, containing records of their sledge journey after they left the balloon.

We took different implements on board the motor boat and then all the expedition's members went ashore to try as best we could to dig everything out and then transport it on board.

It was with strange feelings that we stood on the beach where the brave Andree and his men 33 years ago ended their last polar wandering. In deep silence we went up toward the camp, which only too plainly showed us what had happened.

Sledge Lies by Boat.

There lay the boat half buried in snow, with its nose pointing inland. Alongside it lay a sledge. The top of the sledge was level with the ice. On the snow a few yards away was a piece of black and red cloth, with crude squares cut in for windows—perhaps a part of a tent.

And under the wall of the mountain was Andree himself.

We recognized him only by the monogram on his jacket. He was leaning against the mountain slope a few yards northeast of the boat. He had worn-out Arctic shoes on his feet, but otherwise was well clothed.

Beside him lay a gun and an oil stove. There was oil in the stove, and when we pumped it the oil came out in a fine spray and gas came out at a vent on the side. The apparatus was quite in good order.

Diary Found in Pocket.

In Andree's inner pocket was his diary, but only a few pages appeared to have been written on. We also found in his pocket his pencil and a pedometer.

Between two mounds of earth a short distance away from Andree's body we found, a little later, another member of the expedition who had apparently been laid there by one of the others.

The body was half covered with small stones. It was "frozen down" and very hard to get up.

We also found in the boat some remains of bones, but we have not been able to decide whether they are human bones. Some other articles were found at different places in the camp and carefully gathered up.

Equipment Is Discovered.

Upon examining the boat closer we found many different things. These were the expedition's equipment of all kinds. There were articles of clothing such as stockings and handkerchiefs, an instrument for measuring the velocity of the wind, photographic apparatus, shotguns, a theodolite, sewing articles, a hammer and an ax, and a bag containing navigation books and other things.

On two of the handkerchiefs was the monogram, "N. S." (Nils Strindberg).

As I said before, the boat lay partly buried in the ice and was half full of ice.

After we got the dead loose and transported down to the beach, we began the difficult job of getting the boat free. It lay slightly on its side, so that the right side was quite buried. The other side protruded and was half destroyed.

Boat Rests on Sledge.

During the digging it became evident that the boat was resting on another sledge to which it was well bound. It had four cigar-shaped pillars as foundation. To get the whole thing loose we first had to move the boat and then the sledge.

This sledge, as well as the other one, had metal runners. When we got everything free, we began to transport our find the 150 yards down to the beach.

The ice-filled boat soon became too heavy, and its canvas covering was torn to pieces. Therefore we put five oars under the boat and with five men on each side we tried to carry it. But this method also proved ineffectual. One of the oars broke. It was not until we had removed more ice from inside that we managed to make progress. Then we went carefully toward the beach with what, in more than one sense, was a heavy burden.

Cairn Built on Hill.

Before we left the spot we built a cairn, surmounted by a pole, on a hill just behind the camp. It is easy to see and will make it possible for future visitors to find the place without trouble.

In the cairn we put a bottle with a note written in Norwegian and English. The note said that it was here that the Norwegian "Franz Josef Land expedition" found the remains of the Swedish "Andree expedition.

Everything that had been brought down to the beach was then carried on board one of our walrus hunting boats. The boat became so heavily loaded that it was only a few inches above water level.

The boat was then towed by my motorboat and an hour later we reached the Bratvaag.

Work Finally Done.

We put Andree's boat on one of the boat decks, and thus after 24 hours of labor our work was finally finished. It was certainly fortunate that we had such fine calm weather while we lay at White Island. Because of the dangerous nature of the coast, one can only go ashore when the weather is quite calm.

If there had been wind or waves when we came up under the island there would have been no question of going on land. Therefore, we had to take advantage of the calm weather so as not to be interrupted before we finished.

As soon as the find was made, our walrus hunt was stopped and digging hastily begun. It is therefore possible that the work was not done so scrupulously and neatly as might have been desired. But, taking conditions into consideration, I can say that everything was done that could possibly be to get the work performed thoroughly and conscientiously.

Ice Makes Task Difficult.

Added to this difficulty about weather was the fact that the greater part of our find was buried in the ice, which, of course, rendered difficult the digging up of fragile articles or pieces of cloth.

The camp had been very much plundered by bears. They certainly had destroyed many objects of value. Many articles also were probably born away by the wind and are now lying buried under the snow some distance away.

The camp lay beside a big mound of snow, and it is very possible that under this many of the expedition's belongings can still be found. While we were there however, it would have taken too much work to remove all the snow and ice.

On a visit later in the year possibly so much of the ice would be melted that the work would be easier.

Camp Visited From Beach.

As it may be gathered from what I have recounted, the camp was not very far from the beach and was visible from there. Ordinarily one wouldn't pay much attention to a dark mound in the distance.

It was only after our attention had been called to a tin can on the beach that we began to look around and caught sight of the camp. No cairn or hut had been put up, and if the snow had been only a few feet higher the whole thing would have been covered without a trace.

This summer there has been very little snow in those regions. There is reason to believe that the camp during many summers has been quite buried under snow.

Even if one had examined the land very carefully, he might well have walked right over the camp without seeing anything.

Movements Are Recounted.

As it was, it looked as though the boat had been drawn up from the beach. And as the camp lay in the Eastern part of this naked island there is reason to believe that the members of the expedition came to White Island on its North side and from there went down along the East coast until they came to bare clear land.

After a heavy march over the ice from 83 degrees North, they certainly could not have had very much strength left. They probably died of exhaustion, especially since at the time of the year when they came to the island, sometime in September, it can be pretty cold there.

The reason why they did not go toward Northeast Land (the northernmost part of the Spitzbergen group from which Andree set out, which would perhaps have been just as short as the trip to White Island, might have been because they were continually forced eastward by open water and many openings in the ice.

When thin ice began to form at the beginning of August they would not have been able to go out in their miserable canvas boat for fear of ripping its covering.

Joy Is Imagined.

When they first caught sight of White Island's tall white peak, they must have been filled with new courage and by summoning all their strength sought land.

We can imagine their joy when they came to the island and finally felt firm ground under foot instead of the terrifying driving ice they had been encountering.

But they were never to come any further than this. Exhaustion and cold took them. They surely fought and strove, courageous and brave to the very last, as true sons of the land that mothere them.

For us whose faith it is to find and bring home one of the great pioneers of polar exploration, it has been an occasion of pomp and impressiveness that will never be erased from our memory.

Eastward Course Taken.

On the 7th of August we left White Island and set our course eastward toward Victoria Island. White Island's peak was visible for a long time and again and again our eyes returned to the bleak land which for 33 years hid Andree and his companions from the waiting world.

When we were on Victoria Island we could still, from its highest point, see White Island. It was as though the island would not let us go, but rose majestically and grimly in spite of the fact that we had taken from it one of the greatest secrets of the polar regions.

Robbers Lock Up Police And Get $12,000 Loot

Rye, N. Y., Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Three youthful gunmen robbed an amusement park of $12,000, including 30,000 nickels, just before dawn today, locked two policemen and the cashier in the park police station and escaped without firing a shot.

Armed with sawed-off shotguns, the men drove up to the administration building at Playland, which is operated by Westchester County. They forced Patrolmen Patrick Bruder and Frank B. Hamilton into the police station, which is in the building, and bound Victor Stuegeon, the cashier, with ropes.

The third smashed into the inner office and scooped up the preceding night's receipts. They escaped in an automobile.

Horn Asserts Explorers Died of Cold Rather Than Starvation.

CAN WAS FIRST CLEW

the somehow eerie sight of a great white bear dancing about the cairn of stones that Horn and his men had raised to mark the spot where so much gallantry came at last to nought.

From evidence he found on the island, navigation books, the condition of the lost explorers' fur boots and such matters, Horn estimated they had struggled southward for about 180 miles before they reached the towering island and knew at last that their long battle was done.

The Andree party left Spitzbergen in their balloon on July 7, 1897, and Horn believed that they could not have stayed alive longer than the first part of September.

"The cold killed them," he said. "Their end must have been easy. They slept into death."

It must have been the deadening cold, increasing with the approach of the winter night, and not starvation, that finally conquered them, although exhaustion from their terrible trek across the broken ice may well have been a contributing factor.

Gun Found at Side.

For at Andree's side was found his gun and in the boat was ammunition. There were feathers, too, indicating that birds had been shot, and near Andree, also, was a stove with oil still in its tank.

The cold must have crept over them, slowly but surely sapping their vitality until death itself must have seemed to their numbed minds like a happy destination to their long hard journey. And so they waited for death. And it came. First to one, and his friends protected his body as best they could. Then to another, and the few bones in the boat may mean that he chose that as his bier when he knew the end was close and laid himself down in the frail craft, prepared for death.

And Andree himself, to judge from the position in which his body was found, had resigned himself to inevitable fate. He sat down in the snow and leaned back against the mountain slope, relaxed, knowing at last that any effort would be vain, waiting for eternal release from suffering.

Weather Aids Finders.

The way the discovery of the camp was made seemed as if nature itself had decided that the secret had been held long enough from humanity and for that reason eased its usual barriers about the bleak island.

Dr. Horn said that it would have been impossible to get the bodies and the boat and the other camp equipment to the Bratvaag had it not been for the unusually calm weather which set in just at the right moment and lasted just long enough to permit the work to be done.

Everything had to be dug laboriously from the ice that had set a grip of years on the remains of the balloon expedition and so, of necessity, the work was slow. Had the weather roughened before it was done, the whole attempt would have had to be abandoned, for it is impossible for boats to land on the island except in exceptional calm.

Boats Dodge Icebergs.

There are many peninsulas and on these icebergs are stranded. Between these the boats had to pass, something they could not have done in the customary surf.

Nature was at last kind in another way, Dr. Horn said, in that there had been little snow in the last season, and so the camp and bodies were made visible.

He expressed the opinion that in the years that have passed since Andree and his men died the snow has often piled so high above them that searchers could have walked directly over the camp and never even suspected the grim secret shrouded beneath their feet.

Navy Ship Puts Out.

Tromsoe, Norway, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The Norwegian naval vessel Michael Sars left here tonight to meet the sealer Bratvaag, which has the bodies of the Andree expedition on board, and expected to escort it back here at about 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. The Bratvaag is understood to have left Skjaer Island at the same time the naval vessel left Tromsoe.

After the arrival the bodies of Salomon August Andree and his companions will be brought ashore and given in charge of experts. It is planned that a memorial service be held in a Tromsoe church Friday, so that the people of this city may pay a final farewell to the explorers who perished 33 years ago.

The bodies then will be taken aboard the Swedish boat Svenskund, which will transport them to the homeland, with the Michael Sars and the Bratvaag following. The ships will touch at Aalesund, which is the Bratvaag's home port, so that the people there may pay honor to the dead.

Meyer, master of the Ventura, was presented with a scroll testifying to his brilliant 800-mile dash to the rescue of the Tahiti's 317 passengers and crew members.

now are in the same condition as when we found them, for we have guarded them carefully. Whether those few pieces of bones we found in the boat belonged to the third member of the expedition it is impossible for us to say yet.

"That is a question which will have to be considered by experts. We have felt that it was outside our province to examine the contents of the boat more closely."

Diary Leaves Glued.

Dr. Horn showed me Andree's precious diary and navigation books. The leaves of the diary were glued together from the paste in the binding and from dampness.

Dr. Horn says he believes there is no doubt that Andree's balloon came to grief because of the snow and ice which gathered on it and weighted it down until it crashed. He said the three members of the expedition had not built any hut or cairn. They had used the last bits of their strength to drag their boat up on the land.

"We also found Andree's camera" said Dr. Horn.

"It is of the reflex type and the plates are 2½ by 2½ inches. Fastened to the camera was a compass. The camera had open seams which precludes the posisbility of any pictures being reproduced."

Sextant Full of Ice.

Dr. Horn showed me Andree's sextant. It was full of ice when found and a few hairs from a polar bear were stuck to it.

Among other things found were a pulley which had been used on the balloon two rusty rifles, one woolen mitten some stockings and a canvas cover and fender for the boat. All had been preserved carefully by the finders.

Andree's boat and two sledges stood tonight upon the bridge of the Bratvaag. On all three are these words branded with a hot iron:

"Andre polar expedition 1896."

Diary Holds Secret.

I asked if he thought Andree had written in his diary until the last day.

"Well, that's what we all are asking about, but that can only be answered when the details are known."

Andree's navigation book appears to have been kept extremely well. Horn has put pieces of paper between the leaves in order to preserve the writing. The book is written in pencil, and Dr. Horn said it was easy to read from beginning to end and explains many things.

Pressed for further information, Dr. Horn hesitated, and then said:

"I can not divulge it. That is for others to do. I may say that the navigation book does not go up to the final day.

Dr. Horn expressed the hope that the dairy would prove complete to the final day and will explain the whole mystery. He has kept these two books locked in a drawer in his cabin anad guards them carefully.

Pencil Found in Pocket.

The explorer showed me the lead pencil which he had found in Andree's pocket. The wood was swollen and broken apart. Dr. Horn had tied it together with string.

I also had a chat with Skipper Eliassen, of the Bratvaag.

"It has been a successful trip," he said, "but it went hard on the nerves when we found the bodies.

"This is the most remarkable trip I've made in my 19 years in the Arctic. We made a coffin of unplaned boards in the way we fashion them in the polar regions. It is 6 by 7 feet and contains the remains sewed in canvas.

CITY PLAYS HOST TO HUGE THRONG AT FIREMEN FETE

STREET HEAT AT 102; 66 ARE PROSTRATED

Hospitals Taxed to Care for Those Hit by Hottest Day Since July.

NO QUICK RELIEF SEEN

Prostrating 65 persons, the majority of whom were watching the firemen's parade, the heat yesterday attained a temperature of 102 at the kiosk on Pennsylvania avenue and 98 degrees at the Weather Bureau. It was the hottest day Washington has experienced since the record heat wave of July and August.

Emergency Hospital, where most of the heat victims were taken, was taxed to the utmost. Eight doctors and a large corps of nurses were kept constantly busy for almost two hours.

Of the 65 cases, 50 were taken to Emergency Hospital. The others were treated at Casualty Hospital. A large number were administered first aid on the streets and in stores by ambulance attendants and private physicians. Two ambulances from Emergency Hospital were running continuoualy between the hospital and the line of the parade. An ambulance from the W. W. Chambers Undertaking Co. assisted.

The heat victims began pouring into the hospitals at noon and continued arriving until after 1:30 o'clock. All available beds in the emergency room at Emergency Hospital were filled within a few minutes and cots were brought from other parts of the hospital. They were placed in the main corridor, but were quickly removed to a ward which had been prepared on the lower floor.

Most of those prostrated revived quickly and left the hospital during the afternoon.

The hot spell will continue today and tomorrow and no immediate relief is promised, according to the weather forecast. No rain is predicted.

FIREMEN'S PARADE ENTRIES WHICH WON PLAUDITS OF MAMMOTH CROWD

Some of the high lights of the Firemen's Parade yesterday: Upper left—No. 12 Engine Company float, which won first prize among District entries for best representing service and ideals of the department. Upper right—Barney, Gene and Tom, veteran fire horses of a previous era, now in respectable retirement. Lower left—No. 4 Engine Company (colored), which won first prize for entering the most beautiful float from the District; it portrays Cleopatra and her galley slaves. Lower right—Seat Pleasant, Md., volunteer company, which won first prize for the best decorated fire apparatus.

MARCHING FIREMEN CAPTIVATE CITY THRONG

visiting governors and other members of the official reviewing party.

At that moment, Chief Watson and Sergt. Bargagni believed that they had watched the last of the parades which have come to be recognized as national events. The tremendous cost of holding the parades has placed such a financial strain upon the firemen that they will be unable to repeat the affair next year without outside aid.

Financial Outlay Stressed.

A few minutes later, at a dinner given in honor of Gov. Ritchie and Gov. Pollard, at the Willard, however, when Mr. Smith revealed the difficulties confronting the department, the unanimous declaration of numerous civic and commercial leaders of the District present was that the firemen's parade has become not only a part of Washington, but a part of the Nation itself, and can not be discontinued.

Plans were laid immediately for a meeting of the executive committee of the Washington Board of Trade next Monday noon to devise ways and means for financing the parade in future years. As a result of this meeting, at which Chief Watson will outline the costs of the parade, it is expected that definite arrangements will be made to have a joint committee appointed representing the Board of Trade, the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants & Manufacturers Association, which will guarantee financing of the event up to $5,000, which is considered sufficient to meet all expenses.

Chief Watson said later that at this meeting he plans to suggest that the committee ask Congress to pass legislation permitting the sale of grand stand seats to the public, which in itself would, he pointed out, bring in more than sufficient revenue to finance the entire parade without making the cost of seats excessive. If this idea appeals to the committee the approval of the District Commissioners then will be sought.

In any event, however, it may be accomplished, it was definitely certain last night that Washington's annual Labor Day event, which influences thousands of Washingtonians to remain in town when they would otherwise seek relaxation at the shore or mountains over the three-day holiday, and which draws thousands of tourists to the District, is no longer in danger of abolition because of financial difficulties.

As the visiting firemen called first at No. 1 Truck Co., where they registered, many arriving after all-night trips, were welcomed by the Ladies Auxiliary of the District Fire Department, headed by Mrs. John H. Virnstein, president, which had prepared meals for the out-of-town "smoke eaters." More than 3,000 were fed before falling into line who otherwise would have had to march with empty stomachs.

Six States, in addition to the District, were represented in the line which presented a kaleidoscopic view as units in their variegated uniforms and costumes, and innumerable highly decorated floats ranging in interpretation from the sublime to the ridiculous and back again, surged along the Avenue. There were units from Maryland, Virginia, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and West Virginia.

Those in Reviewing Stand.

Between Gov. Pollard and Gov. Ritchie, in the reviewing stand, sat Miss Mildred Bargagni, daughter of Sergt. Bargagni and hostess to the visiting firemen, a delightfully cool vision of smiling loveliness in her filmy frock of green, a wide-brimmed picture hat of the same tone, and carrying a huge bouquet of roses.

On Gov. Pollard's right sat Commissioner Crosby, and next to him was Maj. Davison, on whose right were Chief Watson and Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police. On Gov. Ritchie's right were Odell S. Smith, chairman of the parade committee, and Sergt. Bargagni, while in the rear of the stand were other members of the parade committee.

Not all the casualties were human spectators in the parade. There was Hotsy Totsy, for instance, canine mascot of Miss Thelma Bonini, deputy drum major of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Overseas Band and Drum Corps, and herself mascot of Front Line Post, V. F. W., which took first prize for the most beautiful float entered by a fraternal organization.

Mascot Is Overcome.

Proudly stepping along in front of Miss Bonini as she twirled a silver baton, in her new summer uniform of olive drab, Hotsy held his head high with grim determination until he reached the Treasury Building, where the parade disbanded. Having done his duty by his mistress and "the old outfit," Hotsy thereupon passed out cold, and it was more than an hour before he responded to heroic first-aid treatment administered by members of the band.

A momentary, unexpected thrill was afforded the crowd at the reviewing stand at one point in the parade when two ambulances, one on each side of the moving column, and a third moving in the opposite direction, all with sirens wide open and preceded by motorcycle policemen to clear the way, narrowly missed colliding directly in front of the stand.

The parade was more air-minded than ever before. While numerous planes droned overhead, others were used as the basic motifs for several floats, the most pretentious being an airplane of the "Spirit of St. Louis" type representing the fire engine of the future. Another aviation idea that attracted comment was the entry of a coal company which offered a float showing two planes refueling in the air.

Gala Day for Drum Majors.

It was a gala day for drum majors, but probably the most imposing of all the baton wielders in the line was Johnny Ray, he celebrated old-time outdoor showman, who organized and conducts the Washington Elks' Boys' Band.

Most spectacular of all the floats in line, and the one which took first prize as the most beautiful entered by a District fire company, was a huge reproduction of Cleopatra's barge, entered by Engine Co. No. 4, a colored unit.

As the end of the column appeared in sight, Gov. Ritchie, Gov. Pollard, Sergt. Bargagni, and Isaac Gans, of the parade committee, spoke briefly through microphones over which a crew of announcers from Radio Station WJSV had been sending a running-fire descriptive broadcast of the event on the air throughout the parade.

Gov. Pollard First Speaks.

Gov. Pollard was the first speaker. He paid high tribute to the firemen as the outstanding heroes of the Nation and complimented the District Fire Department enthusiastically for what he described as the greatest firemen's parade he had ever witnessed.

Gov. Ritchie emphasized the dependence of all the Nation's smaller communities upon volunteer firefighters, and declared that he was proud to be able to witness a parade which demonstrated so remarkable a degree of efficiency and consideration of the safety of the Nation.

Sergt. Bargagni thanked all who had assisted him in the preparations for the parade, and voiced his ambition to see a national firemen's celebration in Washington during the Washington Bicentennial in 1932, when he hopes that firemen's associations from every State in the Nation will hold their annual conventions here simultaneously and participate in the parade.

Giving the public an insight into the financial distress which threatened to make this the last firemen's parade in Washington, Mr. Gans declared that the event must be continued, and that if the Fire Department was unable to carry on further, he would make it his personal duty to see that ways and means were provided.

Heat-Induced Stroke Kills Treasury Guard

Frank P. Murphy, 63, veteran guard at the Treasury Department, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at his home, 2230 Kearney street northeast, from heart failure induced by the heat. Mr. Murphy returned to his home about 3:20 p. m., complaining of illness. Thirty minutes later he collapsed, and was pronounced dead by Dr. C. J. Bowne, of 2001 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

Mr. Murphy is survived by his widow, Mrs. Margaret Murphy; one son, John Holden Murphy, and two sisters, Mrs. Margaret Byrne, and Mrs. Joseph Byrne. He had been employed at the Treasury Department for 12 years. Funeral services had not been arranged last night.

Man Hurt as Horse Skids.

William B. Garner, 40, of 1245 I street northeast, garbed as an Indian chief and heading a contingent of Modern Woodmen of America, suffered injuries to his left leg when his horse skidded on the car tracks at Pennsylvania avenue and Sixth street and threw him to the pavement. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

HOLIDAY PARADES CAPTIVATE WASHINGTON

FIREMAN IS BURNED BY BLAZE ON TRUCK

DOG MASCOT ALSO HURT

Surrounded by thousands of firemen from six states and the District, Fireman Robert Davis, 45, of 537 Fifteenth street northwest, was seriously burned on the hands and face when a fire truck in the parade caught fire at Pennsylvania avenue and Third street. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where his condition was reported as undetermined last night.

"Al" Ihrie had to strut his stuff solo in the parade because his son, "Spot," got himself smashed up in an automobile accident en route to join the column where they were to boost the sale of tickets for the Police-Firemen baseball game at Griffith Stadium next Saturday.

"Al" and "Spot" are Boston bull terriers owned by J. H. Ihrie, a fireman attached to No. 13 truck. At Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast Ihrie's car collided with one driven by Morris Miller, of 1357 Maple View place southeast, and was overturned. Ihrie was uninjured, but "Spot" hurt his leg when he jumped out of the car.

Shoulders swayed and toes tapped in unison as the Community Center Band, each of its members equipped with a megaphone, halted in front of the reviewing stand and played, "When You Smile," with gestures, to the obvious delight of Gov. Ritchie of Maryland and Gov. Pollard of Virginia.

Sergt. A. J. Bargagni has been the busiest member of the Fire Department in his capacity as marshal of the parade for the past several weeks, but yesterday he relaxed and the active role was taken over by Deputy Marshal William H. Barton, who functioned as master of ceremonies and kept the judges advised of the identity of each parade unit as it approached the reviewing stand.

Miss Mildred Bargagni, hostess to the visiting firemen, got lost in the crowds for almost an hour after reaching the terminal point of the parade at the Treasury Building. A delegation of motorcycle policemen finally located, her, however, and brought her back to her post of honor in the reviewing stand between Gov. Ritchie and Gov. Pollard.

America's oldest fire company, the Relief Volunteers of Mount Holly, N. J., was in line yesterday for the first time.

"We have arrived and have the situation well in hand," announced a placard on the truck entered by the Glenn Dale, Md., volunteers.

The judges and reviewing party missed a spectacular sight when someone on the elaborate float entered by No. 22 Engine and No. 11 Truck released a flock of pigeons almost a block before the float reached the reviewing stand.

The Alexandria, Va., contingent, headed by Chief Jimmy Duncan, followed by the Ladies' Auxiliary and the Alexandria Citizens' Band, was greeted with enthusiastic cheers from Virginians all along the line of march.

BEAUTICIANS HEAR DR. REICHELDERFER

Delegates Also Greeted by C. W. Darr; Personality Courses Discussed.

CARRY QUINN IS SPEAKER

The advisability of including lessons in personality in beauty culture was discussed yesterday at the opening session of the tenth annual convention of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, in the Hotel Mayflower. Sessions will continue for five days. Questions of hair styles and kindred problems of beauty culture will be discussed by approximately 1,000 delegates in attendance.

The beauticians were officially welcomed yesterday by Dr. Luther Reichelderfer, chairman of the Board of District Commissioners. Brief welcoming addresses were also delivered by Charles W. Darr, president of the local Chamber of Commerce; Emile Beauvais, president of Washington unit of the national organization, and C. W. Godfrey, of St. Louis, the national president.

After adjournment of the morning session, which was devoted chiefly to routine matters, a luncheon was held in special tribute to the committee chairman of the Washington unit, with Carey Quinn, local attorney, as the guest speaker.

Features of the afternoon session were the opening of an exhibit including every known aid to beauty, and the introduction of Mme. Mabel Cummings Cheney, known as the "woman of eternal youth" by virtue of her success in the application of beauty culture.

There are 36,583,000 acres of land under cultivation in Mexico, or 7¾ per cent of the total.

Beauty, Comedy, Pathos Vie In Colorful Avenue Pageant

Every time there was a gap in the line, north-south traffic along Fourteenth street was speeded across the avenue so that that artery was in practically continuous service throughout the parade.

"We Put 'Em Out," announced a card on the float entered by No. 14 Engine, depicting the annual baseball game between the policemen and firemen, with a huge score board indicating that the smoke eaters were decidedly in the lead.

Smiles vanished briefly as No. 26 Engine's float brought to the spectators a pointed reminder that the fireman's life is not all parades and glory. The float depicted a tombstone on which was engraved: "In Memory of Our Departed Comrades."

Takoma Park, Md., was on hand with its first pumper, acquired in 1919, in sorry contrast to the department's present modern equipment which followed the old-timer.

A decidedly unusual note was struck by the Chambersburg, Pa., volunteers who marched in bronze helmets, tan frock coats, dark trousers, and gleaming white spats, each marcher with a huge yellow dahlia stuck in his button hole.

No. 7 Engine and No. 14 Engine both used the "rescue squad" idea for their comedy floats, although No. 14 was a little more fully equipped, having a derrick with which to hoist "victims" aboard the rescue wagon.

No. 1 Truck and No. 3 Engine told the world that they were part of the District Fire Department with an elaborate float on which was constructed a replica of the Washington Monument surrounded with gigantic flower hearts on which was emblazoned: "Heart of the Nation."

One of the oldest pieces of apparatus seen in the parade was an old hand reel, all shiny with enamel and with huge mirrors glistening on the sides of its drum, entered by the Frederick, Md., volunteers.

A note of prosperity and optimism was struck by Engine No. 10 with its jazz float on which "Me, Him and Eye," in black face, repeated the words and music of "Happy Days Are Here Again" throughout the line of march.

"Barney, Gene and Tom," three real old-timers that dashed to many a general alarm in the old days of horse-drawn apparatus, have participated in every parade since they were retired six years ago and pensioned on a grassy pasture at the Home for Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains.

Many a careless motorist who has been tossing lighted cigars out of his machine while speeding along the rural highways during the present drought thought a little more seriously when he saw the float entered by the Capitol Heights, Md., Forest Fire Squad showing foresters in action.

A novel note in the music line was struck—or blown—by the Accordion Band from Toms River, N. J.

Loretta Brown drum major of the Washington Boys Band, again headed her youthful music makers in a uniform of shimmering white silk.

Delegations of Modern Woodmen of America from all parts of the country, now holding their annual encampment at the Washington Tourist Camp, swelled the ranks of marchers.

The judges were in a tough spot for a while trying to decide what to do about an elaborate float entered by Front Line Post, V. F. W., depicting a front line machine gun nest. They felt that the float deserved first prize somewhere, but could not decide how to classify it. Eventually the entry was awarded first prize as the most beautiful float entered by a fraternal organization.

Maj. Gen. N. D. Hawkins, commander of the Virginia department, United Confederate Veterans, was an interested spectator from a point just to the right of the reviewing stand.

BARGAINS GALORE—Come and See

Thanks to the People of Greater Washington

More gas appliances—by thirty thousand dollars—were sold this past month than ever before in the history of the Washington Gas Light Company.

This is an increase of 38% over the best previous month and double the average August.

More Bryant Gas-Fired Boilers, for heating homes with gas, were sold during the past two months than during the whole of last year.

This wonderful record I attribute to the confidence the Washington Public puts in GAS, the Supreme Home Convenience.

On behalf of the entire personnel of the Washington Gas Light Company and its subsidiaries I express my appreciation to the people of Greater Washington for their increasing patronage.

The next twelve months should be the biggest in the history of this gas company and I look for Washington to play its part in the return of nation-wide prosperity.

THE SUGAR PROBLEM.

Reports from New York that progress is being made toward an international agreement to stabilize the sugar industry may be classed as premature optimism. The plan which is being considered at a conference of American and Cuban sugar producers proposes to limit importations into this country from Cuba and to restrict American production to its present level. But insuperable obstacles, chief of which are the Sherman antitrust law and the opposition of American producers, preclude the possibility that such an agreement can be made.

Cuba offered, through Dr. Viriato Gutierrez, of the Cuban Senate, to limit sugar exports to the United States to 2,800,000 tons next year. In 1932 and 1933 Cuba would increase its exports in accordance with the increase in the American demand. Up until 1934 the American producers, also those of Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands, would agree to produce no more sugar than they produce this year. After 1934 half of the increased consumption would be allotted to Cuba and half to the other producers supplying the American market.

Before the higher tariff became effective Cuba exported about 2,890,000 tons of sugar to the American market annually. But for the current year exports have been sharply reduced. On the other hand, the volume of sugar shipped in from the Philippines, Hawaii and Porto Rico has rapidly increased. The new tariff has given the insular possessions an advantage that they will not willingly resign. Nor can the domestic producers be expected to limit their output for the sake of stabilizing the world situation.

That the proposed agreement would result in stabilization of the sugar industry is open to question. Should Cuba continue its normal export program (as the agreement would allow) and the other producers interested in the American market maintain the accelerated rate of production during 1930, more than 7,000,000 tons of sugar would be supplied. The country at present consumes only about 6,000,000 tons. The surplus would still be a drug on the market even should domestic production remain the same under the higher duty.

It is probable, however, that discussion of voluntary agreements to limit production of sugar is a waste of time. The antitrust laws prohibit domestic combinations designed to manipulate the laws of supply and demand. Petroleum interests sought to curtail production through a voluntary agreement a few months ago, but the Department of Justice immediately discouraged the idea on the ground it would involve violation of the Sherman act. A sharp warning was given to the oil producers in spite of the fact that the administration was making every effort to curtail wasteful overproduction. The law provides:

> Every combination, conspiracy, trust, agreement or contract is declared to be contrary to public policy, illegal and void when the same is made by or between two or more persons or corporations either of whom . . . is engaged in importing any article from any foreign country into the United States, and when such . . . agreement is intended to operate in restraint of lawful trade . . . or to increase the market price in any part of the United States or any article or articles imported or intended to be imported into the United States.

The antitrust laws do not extend to the Philippines, so that an agreement between Filipino and Cuban producers might meet with no legal obstacles. But the tariff virtually puts a premium on Philippine sugar, and the producers there will be in no mood for a limitation agreement. While imports from Cuba have been declining, sugar cargoes from the Philippines almost doubled during the first six months of this year. Benefits of the tariff are going to foreign producers across the Pacific rather than to domestic producers for whom they were intended.

If this is to continue the Filipino interests will be in a position to ruin the Cuban industry and keep the domestic factories in their present static condition. The problem is beyond the scope of an international conference. It can be settled only by Congress, and Congress has shown a disposition to encourage this unnatural trade relationship with an insular domain that is clamoring for political and economic independence.

STATESMEN OUT OF DOORS.

That strange admixture of business and recreation that President Hoover has found so much to his taste on the Rapidan is about to become a fad. Not to be outdone by any Republican idea, a prominent group of Democrats, including Senator Tydings, John W. Davis, John J. Raskob, Senator Pittman, Owen D. Young and Senator Hawes, is establishing a party rendezvous on three sylvan isles in the Chesapeake. The islands have been renamed for Jefferson, Jackson and Wilson. A commodious clubhouse is to be erected, and a new sanctorum of Democracy is expected to rise under the guise of a rod and gun club.

And the law shall go forth from the Blue Ridge, to paraphrase a passage of Scripture, and the thunder of opposition from the Chesapeake. President Hoover has found it very convenient to draw congenial groups of advisers, official and otherwise, about him on the Rapidan. Each week he takes with him a different national problem to intermingle with the fishing, the horseshoe pitching and the social intercourse at the camp. At the end of each jaunt he returns to Washington with a new fund of information, and often with perfected plans for constructive enterprises.

The Democratic national committee may be expected to copy the unique features of the Hoover camp. It may be expected that those charming isles of Jefferson, Jackson and Wilson will resound with conferences, and that many schemes to thwart the Hoover program will be hatched and advertised.

Nevertheless, this movement toward dilution of the bitter cup of politics with refreshing drafts of outdoor recreation is a good thing. It is not characteristic of the twentieth century to take pills uncoated with sugar, or even do one's work without pleasant diversions. There is some hope, too, that the suavity of nature will temper the rigors of politics and bring a larger degree of common sense and toleration into play. If the synthetic Democratic idea-hatchery in the Chesapeake will produce something practical such as frequently emanates from Rapidan's romantic wilds, the country will applaud all statesmen who take to the woods and waters for intellectual as well as physical refreshment.

MR. GORDON'S SUCCESSOR.

The death of John R. Gordon, president of the Merchant Fleet Corporation, is a severe loss to the Shipping Board and the American merchant marine. In the words of Chairman O'Connor, Mr. Gordon "brought to his work the knowledge of an expert and the zeal of an enthusiast." He combined in rare degree technical and executive ability, and as a result inspired confidence in his official associates and throughout the American shipping industry generally.

It is to be hoped that in suggesting to the President the name of Mr. Gordon's successor the Shipping Board will be guided entirely by considerations of fitness, and that factional or political expediency will not be permitted to influence the appointment. Momentous questions await administrative action in connection with the continued liquidation of the Government's merchant fleet. The awarding of mail contracts, the placing into effect of the so-called lump-sum agreements with companies operating Shipping Board lines; the sale of ships and shipping services to American citizens; the retrenchment in personnel and overhead made necessary because of the rapidly dwindling Government fleet—these are but a few of the problems which confront the Shipping Board in its efforts to transfer the Government's remaining merchant vessels to private American interests.

The person selected for the position held by the late Mr. Gordon should be thoroughly familiar with these problems, and should have the resourcefulness to solve them. It may be that instead of bringing in from the outside a new and untried executive, with the consequent danger of immature or reactionary policies, the Shipping Board would do well to select from its own organization the person best qualified to carry out the constructive policies now in effect.

CHINESE SHOULD BE REGISTERED.

Thirty members of the Hip Sing tong were ambushed by On Leong tong gunmen in a New York poolroom in mid-August, and a new tong war began. The U. S. District Attorney served notice on the leaders of six tongs that unless warfare were permanently abandoned the Government would order wholesale round-ups in Chinese districts throughout the country to search out and deport those who were in the United States unlawfully. This meeting was participated in by Ta-Kwang Wu, second secretary of the Chinese Legation, who represented Minister Wu, and J. S. Tow, acting Chinese consul general in New York City. It resulted in the drafting of a "treaty" in which the tongs were to agree that if any one tong should violate the agreement the other five would band against it and assist the authorities in rounding up and prosecuting gunmen and hatchetmen.

The agreement was drafted on August 12, and the representatives of the six tongs promised to return the next day to sign and affix their seals to the document. The On Leong tong, however, which is by far the largest and most influential of all the tongs, ignored the meeting. Since then guerrilla warfare has continued. Several Chinese have been shot down or butchered.

It is high time for the Federal authorities to stop dickering with the tongs. The registration of all Chinese in the United States should be required by law. In this way those who have entered the country unlawfully can be sifted out and deported, and those entitled to remain can be made to keep the peace.

CAUSES OF MOTOR ACCIDENTS.

The New York Automobile Club recently completed an analysis of the causes of 100,000 automobile accidents that occurred in 1929. Slightly more than one-third resulted from right-of-way theft. One-fifth of them were caused by speeding, one-sixth by driving on the wrong side of the road, one-tenth by running off the road and a similar number by failure to give a signal, one-thirteenth resulted from cutting-in, and one thirty-third were caused by ignoring a stop sign. Of the fatalities resulting from these accidents, running off the road contributed one-tenth, speeding one-fourteenth, and passing another car at the top of a hill one-fifteenth.

If such an analysis were available for the country as a whole it would provide an excellent foundation upon which to revise traffic codes. It may be that the causes of accidents in New York are not the causes of accidents elsewhere, for traffic conditions are so abnormal in the southern part of that State that they furnish no basis for an analysis of conditions in the State as a whole. But if the most frequent causes of accidents were known, it should be far easier for traffic authorities to devise regulations for the protection of motorist and pedestrian than it is at present, when guesswork is the principal guide. If the New York analysis should stand up generally, the need for more stringent regulations to prevent "road hogging" would be immediately apparent.

The Donkey is demonstrating such ability to kick that the country will be fully justified in keeping him in a position where he can do plenty of it.

DUBLIN OF TODAY

By Alexander Jacob Reynolds in Current History.

After eight years Dublin is slowly recovering from the fever of freedom. But what a changed Dublin it is! The city is now doing penance for its new virtues. Cleansed of municipal sin, it is seeking its salvation in economic sacrifice and humbly awaits the rewards to come.

One of the most vivid memories of my early days in that city is of the bevy of beautiful girls that thronged Grafton street every afternoon about the tea hour. They enlivened the capital; festive they were but never scandalous. They preferred the wearing of the blue that matched their eyes to the Wearing of the Green, but today that is all past and Dublin is gone green mad, with its green letter-boxes, green on every tongue and Shakespeare's first name Gaelicized to Liam and Milton's to Taoes.

Gone are the glories of those good old days when amid political darkness Dublin sparkled with bohemian gayety and shone with social splendor. Gone are the days when a newly arrived English regiment would have all its bachelor officers engaged to the Irish girls before they had been a week in the place. The days when the Vice-regal Lodge was a court are likewise gone and today it is still called "Uncle Tim's Cabin" by a race which seems peculiarly gifted to bestow fitting names upon those in authority.

Many things have gone and old things have become new. Dublin has adopted a sort of indiscreet night life based on the legends of London or Paris. Where formerly the streets were deserted by 10 at night now the cafes are only beginning to light up. Immense cinemas, with brilliant illuminations, cater with restaurants and dance rooms for a jaded throng. Young girls may be seen by the dozen sitting about in that indecorous, splay-legged manner that is not yet five years old in Dublin, though ten in London. Cocktails are an ordinary diet of these evening ladies and cigarette smoke takes the place of chatter, and the dance rooms rock to the tunes of jazz as they do in many other cities. But the jazz lacks that peculiar lilt of custom; there is no real enchantment in its unconservative appeal; it is not Irish, and that is all there is to it.

The Dublin that throve on excitement languishes in disillusionment and mental dullness. Apathy and dancing go hand in hand. The city is being reborn and the pains of its new birth have left it weak and nerveless. After eight and a half years Dublin spells disenchantment to any one who knew it of old. True, the streets are cleaner, the contract for cleaning them having been given to a French company; previously they waited for a good shower of rain driven by a heavy wind to do it for them. A wonderful system of motor coaches covers the entire length and breadth of the Free State which will take you into quiet villages that the railway never knew, at cheaper rates and in shorter time. The old jaunting cars, so beloved of the English tourist, are fast disappearing and private-looking taxis are taking their place. The streets have been rebuilt; government buildings have been washed and splendid macadamized roads laid everywhere. Electricity is displacing steam in spite of its cost per unit and sports grounds are being provided with stands that should seat thousands of foreign visitors, but these come not.

TWENTY SILVER FOXES.

Summer visitors to Prince Edward Island have observed that fox pens are almost as numerous in the province as hen houses are on farms in the United States, says the New York Sun. In 1878 pioneer breeders at Tignish began experimenting with a score of foxes captured from the wilds. The original twenty were the Adams and Eves of what has become a flourishing industry. In 1913 there were 277 fox farms in the province; in 1928 there were 3,676 fox farms in Canada; in 1929 the Canadian National Silver Fox Breeders Association registered 70,883 new-born cubs, all of them descended from the original group.

CONSIDERING A PROPOSITION.

To be richer means more worry,
More of mind fret, more of worry,
More of planning, more of scheming
And less time for idle dreaming.

Do I want this thing they proffer?
Want the money which they offer?
It is true that I can use it,
Spend and possibly may lose it.

There's another thought to fret me:
Why risk loss that may upset me?
Why pile up the burden greater
To be disappointed later?

I've enough on hand and plenty.
Why seek forty if with twenty
I have all that I have need for—
What is all this flaming greed for?

Round me others strong and clever
Seem to cease their toiling never,
As if urged to buying, selling
By an inner force compelling.

Line by line with calm precision
Calls this contract for decision,
And I hesitate to make it.
Shall I scorn this gold or take it?

Farewell freedom, farewell soul time,
I have signed away my whole time.
Had I spurned this chance they hand me
Very few would understand me.

That they shall not think me funny,
Queer or mad, I take their money
And make mine their ruling passion,
As a woman flies to fashion.

If You Can Build a Ship, Who Will Question Your Ability to Steer It?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

I DON'T believe in prayers for rain.

It seems incredible that an all-wise Providence should disrupt the plan of the universe to make a crop in a land that already suffers from having too much.

The need isn't sufficient to justify a miracle.

Then, too, a petition for rain seems to indicate both a want of faith and an impudent desire to instruct Providence in the business of performing miracles.

People ask for rain because in their experience moisture is essential to plant growth. They ask for the kind of miracle they think necessary—and possible. If they have faith, why don't they ask that the crops be made to flourish without rain? Since a natural law must be broken in any case, isn't it rather impudent to make suggestions? Would you ask a doctor to make you well and then tell him what medicine to use?

Prayers for rain are much like prayers for victory in time of war.

We admit that war is a crime, wholly evil—that it is a direct violation of one of the commandments—but once mixed up in it we ask Providence to help us make a success of it! It is like saying to an officer of the law: "I am trying to rob this house, but I can't get in. Come and help me."

How tremendous is the conceit of man!

Both sides in war engaged in butchery, and both praying to the same God for help! Surely there never was greater blasphemy!

Of the power of prayer I have no doubt. The fact that "natural" laws continue to function is proof that the Creator of all things still lives, for motion stops when the power that began it is withdrawn. To say one does not believe in the "supernatural" is like saying: "I know the universe must have been created by some Power beyond man's comprehension, but I don't believe that Power could do it again."

Has the Creator of the everlasting hills lost the knack of moving mountains?

The answer to most prayers, fortunately, is "No." But how can any logical mind think an answer impossible?

If you grant the power to create a world, surely reason must concede the further power to perform the lesser miracle of changing it.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

WALL STREET STUDY.

Scene: A broker's office. It is shortly after noon. The customers' chairs and benches are empty and coated with a long accumulation of dust. Several clerks are playing chess.

First clerk (suddenly startled)—What was that?

Second clerk—What was what?

First clerk—That funny noise. I heard it distinctly.

Third clerk—You're hearin' things.

First clerk—There it goes again!

Fourth clerk—He's right. I heard it, too.

Second clerk—What was it like?

Fourth clerk—It was a sort of metallic tapping noise. I remember hearing something like it a long time ago, but I can't just place what it was.

First clerk (tip-toeing to the instrument and peering into it)—Look! It's the ticker!

The others (as they flocked around the ticker in amazement)—What do you know about that! Somebody must have bought a stock!

First clerk—But they oughta warn us and not let the darned thing go off suddenly like that and scare hell out of us.

(An alarm clock goes off in an adjoining office.)

Second clerk—What's that?

First clerk— That's the alarm in the boss' room.

Third clerk—What's he getting up for this early? I thought he came in and slept through till the close of the market this year.

First clerk—I don't understand it. There's certainly no reason for him to get up in a market like this.

The boss (bursting into room, very indignantly)—Who monkeyed with that alarm clock? I had it set for 3 o'clock.

Second clerk—Nobody here touched it, boss.

The boss—It's an outrage. It's getting so a broker can't get an unbroken sleep in his own establishment!

(There is a sound of footsteps in the corridor. It gets the immediate attention of every one).

The boss—Psh-h-h-h! It may be a customer.

First clerk—He's coming this way.

The boss—(very excitedly)—Now, boys, let's not take any chances. If he comes in you, Jenks and Atwood, slam the door so he can't get out; and you, Groggins, drag out a nice comfortable chair.

Stranger (entering the office)—Is this the brokerage office of Schlumph, Schlumph & Schlumph?

(Two clerks bound to the door and hold it shut. A third brings a chair. The boss pushes the stranger into it and jumps into his lap to hold him down.)

Boss (to a fourth clerk)—Send out for some lunch, a couple of quarts of red wine, some cigars and some music.

Stranger (struggling)—What's the idea? Let me up! Let me up!

Boss (triumphantly)—Not a chance, mister. The last man who came in here looking for a brokerage office got away!

AERIAL DERBY MOTHER'S SONG.

(After Isaac Watts.)

Hush! my dears, lie still and slumber,
Holy angels guard you there!
Mother's gone to get a number
And win prizes in the air.

Sleep, my babes, thy food and raiment,
House and food I will provide—
If I get the big cash payment
When I in the derby ride.

Ex-President Augusto B. Leguia of Peru, who was forced to flee the country by a revolt, was very friendly toward President Hoover, according to the papers. It is more than possible that the revolt was provoked by a fear this would lead him to introduce Tom Thumb golf in Peru.

"SHE CAN NOT"—"SHE CAN SO."

Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell, winner of the women's air derby, is the mother of two children. The woman who finished second is the mother of three. And you can imagine the child of one family twitting the child of another with, "I betcher my mother kin fly faster'n your mother."

The deposed President of Peru was at one time general agent for the New York Life Insurance Co. in Chile and his native land. And it would be ironical if he had in those days made a practice of asking people, "Where will you be at 67?"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Is Fear of Falling From Airplanes a Trait Inherited by Man From Simian Ancestors?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Darwin's theory that we are distantly related to monkeys is employed in explaining some of the peculiarities of the human race. A current magazine says that the probability that our ancestors were tree dwellers may account for the progress of aviation. Yet the fear of falling might be regarded as much human as Simian. It goes deeply into primitive emotions. Yet Grove Hambridge states in the Forum the fact that nothing in the record of air transportation justifies the fear of riding in airplanes.

The automobile is the cause of many accidents every day. "These automobile accidents have very little effect upon the average man," says the writer. "The fact that there were 31,000 automobile fatalities in one year does not make him resolve to stay out of automobiles. But he reads of an airplane crash and he registers a mental vow (or his wife registers it for him) that he is not going to trust his life to those contraptions until they are safer."

Many people with whom I have talked have said that they would not take an airplane ride for fear that they would meet with an accident yet these same people drive automobiles through heavy traffic and along curved roads at dangerous speeds. Human nature is a funny thing in respect to travel through air and on hard ground. In due time people will scoff at the idea there is any more danger in the air than there is on the ground or on the sea. It is a fear inherited from our monkey ancestors.

Health Not Gained by Fussiness and Fads—Don't Worry, Says Dr. Hutchison.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Health is placed by Dr. Robert Hutchison, who spoke recently before the British Medical Association at Winnipeg, among those elusive blessings which can best be attained by not striving for them. He advises against making life a slave to health, on the theory that "fussiness about health increases fears and impairs the serenity which is the basis both of health and happiness.

As a distinguished poet advises in the courting of fame, one may make health his bow and bid her adieu; then if she likes it she will follow you. Dr. Hutchison thinks that Americans are inclined to do too much fretting on the subject, and to allow themselves too little of the complacence and serenity that was characteristic of a former age. His appeal is for a return to naturalness.

What impression this advice had upon the audience of physicians is not clear, but it will appeal to us laymen. Physical directors who advocate rigorous exercise for every one began to lose their following some time ago, and science has proved that the person who avoids overstrenuous exertion has a better chance for good health and longevity. Unreasonable dieting is also falling into discredit. There has been too much exploitation of the public by "health specialists" and patent food preparations.

Larger Trees in Washington Withstanding the Drought—Damage to Others Not Permanent.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You may count me among those who think the chief esthetic asset of the City Beautiful is now and, let us hope, always will be the abundance of shade trees that adorn its streets and parks. At the same time I think that those are unnecessarily disturbed who fear that the city's arboreal charm will be destroyed by this summer's drought. My observation has not been extended enough to be called expert, but as far as it goes the trees of Washington do not seem to be dying of thirst. Some of the smaller trees, whose roots do not yet reach far under ground, do show signs of suffering from the dry, hot spell. But even of these a great proportion show no signs of permanent decadence. The larger trees are not much more sere than is usual at this time of year, a few yellow leaves dropping earthward to let us know that fall is almost here. Generally speaking, the greenness of our streets is not at the present time lacking in freshness.

Heavy Taxes Discourage Ownership in Homes and Send People Into Apartments.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Federal Government advocates the private ownership of homes and encourages citizens to purchase homes. It is a fine idea, but every year it is becoming harder and harder to carry out, as the taxes are being raised constantly. Increased taxation is driving many home dwellers to apartment houses. If the water rent does not go up then it is the tax on the property, or else the tax to help pay for street repairs or for the widening of an alley. With these conditions prevailing it is much cheaper to live in an apartment than it is to own a home.

Trees in Parks Could Be Watered if Sprinkler Men Were on the Job.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some of the trees in Franklin Square are rapidly losing their leaves. This condition is brought on by lack of rain. When walking through the park I noticed a number of sprinklers in operation, but the water did not reach the trees. Some of the trees in this park are magnificent specimens, with many historic associations. It is a pity that they must suffer and die for lack of water.

The men who handle the sprinklers could easily shift them to a position so that the trees would benefit from the water. It does not take much water for the grass, whereas it takes a great deal of water to penetrate to the roots of trees, some of which are a century old. The city parks are made beautiful by the stately and majestic trees, and this natural beauty should be preserved so that it may be enjoyed by the future residents of the city. It is the duty of the park attendants to water these trees.

JUSTICE OFFICIALS TO SURVEY CRIMES

Police Chiefs' Association Is Assisting in Project Undertaken by U. S.

WILL PUBLISH REPORTS

(Associated Press.)

The Justice Department yesterday assumed the gigantic task of collecting crime statistics from all parts of the Nation and maintaining an accurate and up-to-the-minute index of underworld activity.

With the approval of Congress, it took over a project inaugurated three years ago and carried on since that time by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, assisted by the Rockefeller Foundation.

The new division of criminal statistics is under the supervision of J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation. The cooperation of police officials in the larger cities has been secured and a uniform plan of submitting crime reports adopted.

Resume to Be Made Public.

From more than 800 cities these reports will go to the department at regular intervals, to be classified and indexed. Each month the department plans to make public a resume of the data received.

A central office or clearing house for the compilation of current crime statistics has long been urged by law-enforcement officials and prominent criminologists as an essential step in the reduction of crime.

The Association of Police Chiefs, after endeavoring to secure congressional authorization for the establishment of such an agency, set up one of its own some three years ago. From 400 chiefs originally making reports to the association the number has grown until it has now more than doubled.

Bill Signed on June 5.

Last winter Congress approved the program and President Hoover signed the bill on June 5.

For the time being the department is to be assisted in its new undertaking by the permanent staff of the association, but it hopes soon to handle the project with its own facilities.

The monthly bulletins will be limited to "offenses known to the police." The more serious crimes will be tabulated under their own headings and in addition a recapitulation showing crime conditions by States and geographical divisions is planned.

Man Killed in New York City Hall Postoffice

New York, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—James Desio was shot and killed today in the City Hall branch of the postoffice, in the Federal Building, where he was employed as a clerk.

Preliminary investigation indicated that the shooting was accidental, the gun being discharged by someone else other than Desio with no witnesses present. The death was listed by police as "suspicious" pending full investigation by Federal officers. Desio was 34 years old.

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

IT fills one with an overflowing pride and sense of gratification as he travels over the country broadening his mind to learn that no other city excels Washington in the number of traffic lights. Dear Old Washington, the old Nation's Capital, which only yesterday led the Nation in the celebration of Labor Day—to know that it will bow to no city in its profusion of lights—well, one does not want to get sentimental about it, but it just takes the crown princess' jewels, that's all.

Of course, there is a little town up there in Connecticut that has quite a traffic light spree at one intersection. It has a light commanding "Turn around!" another, "Go on!" and still another, "Back up!" the like of which Washington can not begin to claim.

BUT to the collector of rare traffic lights, the traffic light connoisseur, that is to say, one who knows his traffic lights and can readily tell a traffic light of the period of 1920 from that of 1930—to one of this sort such a display is gaudy and shocking to the keen traffic light taste.

It reveals the town immediately as a traffic light nouveau riche, having nothing of the traffic light aristocracy in its arteries, just a blundering, uncouth town from which refined traffic lighters would involuntarily shrink.

ONE, of course, hesitates to even refer to the plate in polite traffic light society but any rate it may be immediately dismissed when contemplating the traffic light beauties of our own town.

One has only to drive into our town to see that a queen's taste has been exercised in the placing of the lights, much more taste, in fact, than one finds in the metropolitan centers. It is doubtful, indeed, if that boasting city, of New York could collect as many lights and crowd them in with the delicate propriety, the sense of traffic light rythmn and architecture that has marked their placing here.

There are instances, of course, where they have been placed midway the block but one must realize that Washington is not as large as many other cities, and certainly they have been so placed here as not to give shock to the sensibilities.

* * * *

IT is doubtful if any other city in the country, forsoothe, has placed as many lights within the same space as our own dear authorities have done and their traffic light decorousness is unquestionably unexcelled.

Some recognition should be given to these men for what they accomplished. Public servants should not be unappreciated, their work is due to the outpouring of this town.

They should be taken down to the Ellipse, these traffic authoritels of ours, and there in the presence of the populace traffic lights should be hung on their ears and garlands of them, eternally blinking, hung around their necks.

Minister Tells Police Of Kidnaping, Beating

Warrants have been issued for three men Mr Carlisle said he recognized.

Suicide Indicated In Death of Heir

Charles E. Bedford, Jr., Is Found Dead in Hotel, Gas Pipe in Mouth.

New York, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Charles E. Bedford, jr., 26 years old, identified by police as a son of the president of the Vacuum Oil Co., was found dead in a Brooklyn hotel today under circumstances which police said indicated suicide.

There was a gas pipe in Bedford's mouth when attendants discovered the body and the windows were tightly shuttered. Police made the identification through letters in the room.

Charles E. Bedford, of New York, the father, and other members of the family were said to be at their summer home at Bellport, on Long Island, but could not be reached immediately. Police said Bedford escaped in 1923 from the Bloomingdale Hospital, an asylum at White Plains, N. Y. He had twice been committed to institutions, they asserted. The hotel management said he had lived there for five years.

QUICK DRYING WHITE ENAMEL has been developed to meet the need for an enamel that dries quickly enough to permit a complete two-coat job in one day, where necessary. It is not a lacquer type product.

This speed in drying has been obtained in DUPONT QUICK-DRYING WHITE ENAMEL without a sacrifice of the desirable qualities, such as ease of brushing, flowing and whiteness. It flows out free from brush marks.

QUICK DRYING WHITE ENAMEL has good gloss and color, and covers solidy, possessing unusual durability and elasticity. In fact, this product possesses all the good points of the usual long-oil enamel, with the outstanding advantage of quick drying. It is manufactured with a special gum-type vehicle, and carries a high percentage of enamel lithophone, which gives it its extremely fine finish.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

King of Siam Expected to Visit Capital

Ruler Coming to New York for Operation on His Eyes.

By JEAN ELIOT.

WHILE the King of Siam will travel incognito on his proposed visit to the United States, he will doubtless be accorded the honors reserved for royalty if he comes to Washington. And presumably he will, as it is the custom for foreign rulers to pay a call of ceremony upon the President of the United States as soon as possible after they have set foot on American soil.

It will be remembered that the Prince of Wales, when he came to this country on his second visit, resumed his princely role long enough to come to Washington for a formal luncheon with the President and Mrs. Coolidge. And this time he had come officially incognito, although his visit had been heralded from pole to pole, especially to view the international polo matches on Long Island and to enjoy some of the informal gayeties which he had been obliged to forego when he came the first time as an official good will envoy from Great Britain.

Moreover, although Queen Marie's more or less triumphal progress through the United States was made unofficially, it was as the Queen of Roumania that she was received in Washington in the Coolidge administration.

The visit of a reigning sovereign is an event of sufficient rarity to insure a brilliant and colorful reception when—or if—King Prajadhipok and his queen come to town.

The semi-official advices from Bangkok, which tell of his majesty's proposed trip, state that he will visit New York to undergo an operation for an affection of the eyes which has troubled him for four years. It is understood that he is suffering from cataract on both eyes. Present arrangements call for a journey by way of Hongkong, Tokyo and Vancouver. The king and queen will return by the same route and it is safe to prophesy that, if all goes well, there will be a stopover in Washington, either coming or going.

The marriage of Miss Rose Elizabeth Hall, daughter of Col. Newt H. Hall, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Hall, to Ensign John W. Murphy, U. S. N., was solemnized yesterday morning in St. Stephen's Church, the Rev. George Harrington, uncle of the bride, officiating. Lieut. Murphy is the son of Capt. F. J. Murphy, U. S. N., and Mrs. Murphy.

The ceremony at 8 o'clock was followed by a nuptial mass and afterward Col. and Mrs. Hall entertained members of the two families at breakfast.

The bride wore a gown of eggshell color brocade with a hat in the same shade and carried a white prayer book.

Those at the wedding included Capt. and Mrs. Murphy and their daughter, Miss Margaret C. Murphy, who came by motor from Charleston, S. C., where Capt. Murphy is in command of the Naval Hospital; Lieut. and Mrs. John Ellison, the latter formerly Miss Frances Hall whose marriage took place in Washington last year, and Miss Ethel Harrington, a cousin of the bride, of Minneapolis.

In the course of a motor trip, Ensign and Mrs. Murphy will visit Capt. and Mrs. Murphy in Charleston. Later they will go to New York, home port of Ensign Murphy's ship, the U. S. S. Salt Lake City.

Col. and Mrs. Hall will return to Newport by motor and will be accompanied by the latter's sister, Mrs. Alexander H. McCormick of Washington, who will be their guest for a fortnight.

Col. and Mrs. Carroll DeForest Buck have arrived in Washington from Honolulu and are at the Brighton Hotel, where they expect to make their home while in town.

The Women's National Press Club will resume its weekly meetings today with an informal luncheon at the Willard. There will be no guest of honor.

MISS ALICE CARTER BOWIE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Booth Bowie, of Fair View, Md., is a debutante of the coming season. She will be introduced at the first Bachelors' Cotillion in Baltimore and will spend part of the winter in Washington with her aunts, Miss Helen Williams and Mrs. Francis G. Addison.

Firemen Have Mrs. Dougherty For Luncheon

Benefactions of Social Leader Are Cordially Reciprocated.

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty was a guest yesterday, the only feminine guest, at the luncheon given at the Willard following the firemen's Labor Day parade. She shared honors with Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland and Gov. John Garland Pollard of Virginia, who had been in the reviewing stand as the fire fighters from the District and half a dozen Eastern States marched up Pennsylvania Avenue. The guests numbering twenty-four, included the Chief of Police, Major Pratt, the Chief of the Fire Department, Major Watson, and members of the citizen's committee which helped to make a success of the pageant.

For several years Mrs. Dougherty has been regarded as the good angel of the police and fire laddies. She organized several balls for the benefit of the relief funds of the police and fire departments and it was through her good offices that they shared in the proceeds of the great charity inaugural ball, which marked President Hoover's inauguration and by which a large sum was raised for distribution through the Community Chest. Moreover, Mrs. Dougherty has recently endowed a room at Casualty Hospital in memory of her husband, the late Capt. Dougherty, U. S. N., which is reserved for the use of members of the police and fire departments.

Mrs. A. Robert Is Married to Navy Officer

Lieut. Metcalfe Takes Bride in Church of Covenant.

Mrs. Agnes Ashford Robert, daughter of Mrs. Snowden Ashford and the late Mr. Ashford, was married yesterday to Lieut. Edward Conrad Metcalfe, U. S. N., the ceremony taking place at noon in the Church of the Covenant. The Rev. Irving W. Ketchum officiated. Following the service, which was attended by a small group of close friends of the bride and bridegroom, there was an informal breakfast at Mrs. Ashford's home at 2700 Connecticut avenue.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Snowden Ashford, and Lieut. Vaughan Michaux, U. S. N., was best man for Lieut. Metcalfe. The men of the wedding party were all in white, the bridegroom and his best man wearing uniform; and the bride had chosen a gown of beige flat crepe, made very simply with a tiered skirt. Her close fitting hat was of chocolate-colored felt, with an ornament at the back, and she wore a shoulder bouquet of tea roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Ashford's costume was of thin dark blue chiffon, with a small dot of beige, and with it she wore a beige straw hat and a corsage bouquet of orchids.

Lieut. Metcalfe and his bride will spend the first part of their honeymoon with his mother, Mrs. James Montross Metcalfe, at Natchez, Miss. Afterward they expect to make visits in New Orleans and Fort Benning, Ga., reaching Annapolis, where they are to be stationed, about September 25. They have taken a house in Revel street until spring, as Lieut. Metcalfe will be on duty as instructor at the Naval Academy through the winter.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Thomas L. Wattles, sister of the bride; Baron and Baroness Luigi Filippo Marincola di San Floro, of Newport, and Miss Daisy Reed, of Fort Benning, Ga. Mrs. Wattles, wife of Lieut. Wattles, U. S. N., returned a few weeks ago from Honolulu, where Lieut. Wattles is stationed, and will pass the coming winter here, rejoining her husband in the spring.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Edith Boyce Gonzalez, daughter of Mrs. Julian C. Gonzalez, of Galveston, Tex., and New Caanan, Conn., to Lieut. Martin Perry Hottel, U. S. N., which took place in St. Mark's Church, New Caanan, on Saturday afternoon. The ceremony, performed by the Rev. Dr. Stephen A. Keeler, was followed by a reception at the home of Mrs. Gonzalez.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Julian C. Gonzalez. Mrs. Vernon Cook, of Cambridge, Mass., was matron of honor, and the group of bridesmaids included Miss Catherine Hottel, of Washington; Miss Margaret Pitt and Miss Elizabeth Sawyer, of Stamford, Conn.; Lieut. S. G. Hooper, U. S. N., was best man. Ushers were Lieut. Roscoe Hughes, Lieut. R. A. Cavanaugh, Lieut. R. A. Guthrie, Lieut. A. W. Kechne, Lieut. R. B. Boyer, Ensign J. A. Boyle, Ensign A. B. Barrington, Mr. W. S. Parsons and Mr. Vernon Cook, jr.

Lieut. Hottel is the son of Capt. and Mrs. James Freeman Hottel, of Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Valdemar T. Hammer, of Branford, Conn., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Rogers Hammer, to Louis C. Scherer, jr., son of Col. and Mrs. Louis C. Scherer, of this city, and Brookville, Ontario, Canada.

Miss Hammer was graduated from Miss Master's School, Dobbs Ferry, and is a member of the New Haven Junior League. She is on the board of managers of the Children's Community Center.

Mr. Scherer was a member of the class of '21 at Groton and was graduated from the United States Military Academy, West Point, in 1925. He received a degree for post-graduate work at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1928 and also served in the United States Army. He is in business in Chicago.

Representative and Mrs. Maurice H. Thatcher are now in Seattle, Wash., where they went to take part in the christening of the cruiser, U. S. S. Louisville, launched yesterday. The sponsor for the vessel was Miss Jane Brown Kennedy, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Kennedy, of Louisville.

King's Cousin Lunches With Envoy Dawes

Ambassador Visiting in Spain Will Next Go to Paris.

The Infante Alfonso of Orleans, cousin of the King of Spain, and his wife, the Infanta Beatrice, went to Seville yesterday to have luncheon with Gen. Charles Gates Dawes, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, who has been devoting a holiday visit to Spain to studying the story of the prehistoric man.

Arriving at the Andulusian capital, Ambassador Dawes turned from research into the far past to visit its many picturesque sites. He inspected the Seville cathedral, which contains the tomb of Columbus and the Giralda, the great tower constructed by the monks when Andalusia was the center of Moorish culture. From Seville Gen. Dawes will go to Paris.

The Infante Alfonso was a visitor in Washington in the spring, having made the trip to the United States in the Graf Zeppelin and coming to town to convey greetings from King Alfonso of Spain to President Hoover. He was then a guest at the Spanish Embassy.

Mrs. A. John Driscoll entertained at a trousseau tea on Sunday afternoon at her residence in Woodley road in honor of her daughter, Miss Alice Driscoll, whose wedding to Mr. Paul Andrews will take place on Wednesday.

Mrs. Harry S. Black has left the Plaza Hotel, New York, to visit her father, Col. Henry May, at Southampton.

Could Write a Book About It

"Nine years ago after my little girl was born dead, I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for about four months. The next year I became the mother of a fine 11 pound baby boy. After he was born, I kept on with the medicine to build me up. Four months ago I was nervous and rundown and suffered from other troubles which I knew Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would relieve so I started taking it and now I feel fine again. Many of my friends could write a book on the good the Vegetable Compound has done them."—*Mrs. W. CRUISER LOUISVILLE LAUNCHED ON COAST

Kentucky Girl, 13, Breaks Bottle of Water to Christen Vessel.

SISTER SHIP KEEL LAID

Bremerton, Wash., Sept. 1 (A.P.)—Uncle Sam today added a new greyhound to the Navy, the cruiser Louisville, and laid the keel for the Astoria, a sister ship.

A Kentucky miss, 13-year-old Jane Brown Kennedy, of Louisville, was given the honor of breaking a bottle of water from the Abraham Lincoln Spring in her State across the bow to christen the Louisville.

The Louisville, a light cruiser, 600 feet long, with a speed of 37 miles an hour, will be a division flagship, carrying 39 officers and 623 men. Two other naval vessels previously have borne the name of the Kentucky city.

The Louisville sponsoring party included Miss Kennedy, her maids of honor, Misses Ruth Cole and Henrietta Henderson; Representative and Mrs. M. H. Thatcher, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Kennedy and Mrs. E. L. Henderson.

An honorary riveting party for the exercises of the laying of the keel of the Astoria was led by Gov. A. W. Norblad of Oregon.

The visitors were the guests of Admiral and Mrs. Henry J. Ziegemeier at the commissioned officers mess at noon. A military, naval and industrial parade was reviewed by the official parties prior to the launching of the Louisville set for 2:30 p. m.

Modern methods of launching, with no cutting of blocks or rattling of chains, were used in putting the Louisville into service.

Early today the valves in the dry dock in which she was built were opened and the ship was floated. With steam up it was to move slowly out of the dock after the dedication to the strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "My Old Kentucky Home."

First Hunting Day Victim Is Claimed

Man Killed Near Oxon Hill as Gun Is Accidentally Discharged.

Maryland's hunting season claimed a victim yesterday on the first day. Robert Swann, colored, of Washington, was mortally wounded while hunting with a companion on Piscataway Creek, about 5 miles from Oxon Hill, Md. The colored man had started to put his gun down in the boat when it went off, discharging a load of shot into his chest.

The companion ran for aid, but the man apparently was killed instantly. County Policeman Frank P. Prince and Constable Clinton Perrigo investigated but decided that the death was accidental. It is not believed that an inquest will be necessary.

Swann and Silas Taylor, also colored, had gone hunting early in the morning and were on their way home when the shooting occurred. Swann had climbed into the boat and grasped the gun barrel to lay the gun in the bottom of the boat when it was discharged.

Constitution Hall Contest to Raise Record to Be Held This Morning.

Twelve Washington boys will attempt to raise the record for indoor hand-launched model airplanes in the District this morning in Constitution Hall. Following this morning's tests, the records for the National Committee will be completed by the District of Columbia Model Aircraft League. The National Committee has been charged with selecting the 60 boys having the best records in the country who will be eligible for competition at the national convention which will be held in Atlantic City October 10 and 11.

Those who are taking part in the contests this morning include Frank Ball, Lloyd Busching, George Leffler, Harry McGuinness, Everett Meeks, John Pendleton, Douglas Phillips, Billy Pizini, Frank Salisbury, Luther Schmidt, George Shipley, John Sullivan, Robert Towles and Sam Walker.

AUSTRALIA FEELS BUSINESS SLUMP

Country Hitherto Immune Now Feels Depression Very Keenly.

WOOL CRASH IS COSTLY

Sydney, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Australia's most entire immunity from the depression that most countries experienced immediately after the war has made the inevitable depression all the more acute, now that it has finally come.

Neither in regard to labor, the wages and conditions of which are rigidly governed by arbitration court awards, nor commodities had there been any appreciable easing of the high rates established during the war. Labor costs had, indeed, risen in many instances because the unions when seeking renewal of an award always try for higher wages and easier conditions, and the judges of the arbitration court being in many cases the nominees of labor governments, have frequently conceded these advances.

The first definite stand by employers against maintenance of a system that was discordant with conditions applying in other countries with whose products Australia has to compete, led to the prolonged strike in the coal industry. To a considerable extent this industry was dependent on export to South America and the cost of production became too high for competitive prices to be quoted.

The resolute stand of the owners resulted in lower wages. Then last December came the crash in the world's wool prices, causing a loss to Australia of $200,000,000 on the season's clip.

The money received for wool in London has always been the chief factor in balancing payments for English exports to Australia. Naturally so huge a shrinkage in wool receipts affected the balance of trade adversely to Australia, and the exchange rate—never an important factor previously—rose rapidly and alarmingly. To correct this heavy gold shipments were made to London, but that was only a palliative and one that could not be often repeated.

The situation called for even more drastic measures, in the shape of enormously increased customs duties, aimed at reducing imports, and the actual prohibition of imports in many luxury lines. While, within a few months, this has markedly reduced imports, it has also had the boomerang effect of slashing the commonwealth's revenue from customs' duties.

Mud From Lake Erie Nets Canada $200,000

Toronto, Sept. 1.—The provincial government will be enriched by $200,000 or more this year from the sale of Ontario mud to such American cities as Detroit and Toledo, it is estimated by Thomas W. Gibson, advisory consultant to the department of mines.

That sum, at least, he thinks, will be collected by the government from private Canadian operators engaged in dredging operations for the sandy composition found in great quantities in Lake Erie, off the southwest corner of Essex County. It is very valuable as a fill for cribwork in connection with dock extensions and "landmaking." This can not be found on the American side of the lake.

Thin Customers Swamp Aviation Company

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Sept. 1.—An aviation company advertised that it would take passengers for a half hour flight over the vicinity at a rate of 1 cent a pound. A rush of patrons swarmed the field. The gathering strongly resembled a convention of midgets. Hollow-chested flappers with boy friends weighing less than 100 pounds climbed into every plane on the field. The aviation company got enough. The price will be $3 a ride, whether the customer weighs a hundred pounds or a ton.

German Postoffice Workers Take Exercise

Berlin, Sept. 1.—Early morning visitors to the ministry of posts in Berlin can now see a novel sight. One long corridor of the building is full of men and women in gymnasium suits, working with the medicine ball, doing setting up exercises, and ending with a short run up and down the corridor.

PIG HIT, SEEKS CEMETERY.

Regina, Sask., Sept. 1.—When a pig wandered into the Regina highway and was struck by an automobile it crawled inside the gates of a local cemetery, collapsed and died. James Fenton, cemetery caretaker, vouched for the story.

Former President Of Peru in Prison

Leguia Taken From Ship to Island Where Once He Jailed His Foes.

Lima, Peru, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Augusto B. Leguia, who just a week ago resigned as president of Peru on demand of a military junta, today was placed in an island prison where in the eleven years of his dictatorship he jailed hundreds of political foes.

The island is San Lorenzo, in Callao Harbor.

The former president was removed to it from the cruiser Almirante Grau, on which he took refuge after his resignation. There he became ill, and although last week he was scheduled to be transferred to the prison the move was delayed until the 67-year-old man's health improved.

Since the revolt has made over the Peruvian government, Leguia's political enemies have been released and new garrisons have been installed on the island. Detachments of these soldiers came to the Almirante Grau in two launches today and put the former president aboard for transportation to the prison.

What Price Shaving Set? Husband Asks

He Also Wants to Know What Wife Paid for Dishes.

Milwaukee, Wisc., Sept. 1.—Arnold C. Otto, who is suing Rose Lucille de Werth Otto, interior decorator, for divorce, filed a notice in circuit court demanding that his wife's counsel, George E. Ballhorn, turn over papers revealing how much his wife paid, among other things, for the shaving set she bought for him. Otto says that before their marriage in April, 1929, he agreed to finance a honeymoon trip to Europe and she agreed to furnish the apartment. She has taken everything from the apartment, he says, and he wants it back, claiming he has an interest in the furnishings because of the alleged pre-nuptial agreement, which Mr Ballhorn refers to as a "fantastic dream."

The honeymoon cost him $4,500, whereas the furnishings cost his wife not more than $2,000, Otto says, although he does not pretend to be an expert appraiser of furniture. He asks the invoices for that reason.

Among the furnishings of which Otto wants to know the purchase price are the shaving set, etchings, pictures, paintings, rugs, a French table, French chairs, chinaware, breakfast dishes, dinner dishes, wallpaper, a bedroom suite, a mirror, a davenport, lamps and curtains.

Georgia's exports were valued at $70,935,462 in 1929.

Marine Tells Secret About Khaki Pants

Philadelphia, Sept. 1.—A newspaper man preparing for a "rough-it" vacation decided the new khaki pants looked a little too amateurish. What to do?

The drug store recommended a patent color remover, to give them that mellow look. But the color held fast. He called the navy yard, asked for the marine on duty at the main gate and asked him what the marines did to give their khaki that hard-boiled buff tone which looks so smart.

"Salt water, buddy," said the soldier. "Just give 'em a good scrubbing." And it worked like a charm.

Wife Wont Live Here, Spouse Asks Divorce

Milwaukee, Sept. 1.—Julius Kutasi, 42, a farmer living in the Port Washington road, believes that a woman who will leave a husband in Milwaukee County to live in a Hungarian town by the name of Gyoreszabadhegy ought to be divorced, so has begun action in circuit court against Anna Kutasi, 37.

The couple were married in New York in 1912 and in 1919 Anna took her two children, his life's savings of $6,000 and went to Hungary, Julius says in his complaint. He says he has tried to get her to come back but that she refuses, and that the only time she writes to him is to get money so she can pay taxes on her Hungarian property. Circuit Judge John C. Kleczka signed an order for publication of the husband's summons.

Postal Scales Use Old Razor Blades

Inventor Says They Make Superperfect Springs to Weigh Mail.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 1.—The dawn of a new order of things is at hand, when harrassed man no longer will be under the necessity of taking ocean voyages or excursions to the Grand Canyon to get rid of his old safety razor blades. To Walter S. Smith, developing engineer of the Exact Weight Scale Co., who probably has more scale patents to his credit than any living man and who is an international figure in this field, goes the credit for finding a use for the old blades. They make superperfect springs for eight-ounce self-computating postal scale.

The scales are absolutely accurate, and due to the fine grade of metal in the springs, are not affected either by climatic conditions or long usage. While they were made by Mr. Smith as a novelty just to see what could be done with the second hand blades, they really have a commercial possibility. He estimates that such scales could be produced to retail at $1.50.

A chart instantly shows the weight and amount of postage on first, second and third class mail. Mr. Smith has been experimenting with and inventing scales for 30 years, and was the founder of the Exact Weight Co., of which the Exact Weight Scale Co. is the successor. The firm has a large European manufacturing branch.

Tax on Slot Machines Is Planned in Omaha

Omaha, Sept. 1.—Mayor Metcalfe has introduced an ordinance laying a heavy occupation tax on merchandise vending machines that tend to take revenues away from rent-paying merchants who employ Omaha citizens in their establishments.

The mayor has in mind gum, candy, cigarette and perfume machines and all appliances of this type The machines installed in street cars would be affected.

Cigarette machines, of which several hundred are in use, pay a tobacco tax of about $1,700 a year, which goes into the school fund.

The amount of tax in the ordinance on all these machines has not been fixed but it will be so high, the mayor said, that it will discourage their continued use. Weighing machines will be included, but the tax on them will be nominal.

CLERKS FACING QUIZ IN U.S. BUILDING FIRE

Employes of Three Bureaus to Be Questioned Today by Investigators.

CAUSE OF BLAZE SOUGHT

Capt. Ray C. Montgomery, head of the U. S. Park Police, and H. R. Owens, of the buildings division of the Department of Public Buildings and Public Parks, will today question employes of the Department of Labor and the Federal Trade Commission in an attempt to ascertain the cause of the fire which Saturday destroyed Temporary Building, No. 5, where these bureaus were housed.

No formal hearing will be held but employes will be questioned. There will be no cessation in the work of any bureaus which were evicted by the fire. All employes will report for work today.

Laborers were busy all yesterday in transferring office equipment from sidewalks near the ruined building to the new quarters in Temporary Building, No. 4, on C street at Twenty-first street.

The Women's Children Bureau of the Department of Labor will be housed in the new quarters. The Federal Trade Commission will be housed temporarily in Building No. 4 and will then be moved to the Washington Building at Fifteenth street and New York avenue.

Telephone equipment has been installed in the new temporary quarters. When the fire started on Saturday, the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. sent men to the place who covered the switchboard with fireproof and water proof tarpaulin. It was undamaged in the fire.

Since the fire the telephone company had had an emergency crew in the new quarters installing telephones. When the employes return today they will find normal telephone service.

The switchboard has been removed from the old quarters and will likely be placed today in the Washington Building. Another switchboard will be installed in Building No. 4.

Police Detain Man Driving Stolen Motor

Captured by Policeman L. A. Wearley, of the Tenth Precinct, at New Hampshire avenue and Park road northwest, after a chase of several blocks, William H. Simms, Negro, of W street, near Sixth street northwest, was held for investigation following the discovery, police say, that he was driving a stolen automobile.

Police records show that the car Simms was operating was stolen from Thomas Kelly, of Willard street northwest, Thursday. No charge has been placed against Simms.

CRASH ENDS PLANE RACES

Frank Hawks, holder of the transcontinental speed records, dropped out with motor trouble in the fifth lap. He started the favorite.

The average speed of the winner—201.91 miles an hour—was the greatest ever attained in a national air race event. Haizlip averaged 199.80 miles an hour for second place, and Ben O. Howard, of St. Louis, who never expected to have a chance with his tiny little plane of low power, took third place with an average speed of 162.80 miles.

The race was the seventh in which Howard finished in money. He won five.

Capt. Wilfred G. Moore, of Kansas City, went aloft shortly before the Thompson race in his try for the altitude record with one passenger. He came back down an hour and a half later with an altitude reading something over 28,000 feet—sufficient for a world's record if his barograph corroborates the altitude when it is tested by the Bureau of Standards.

Girl Goes Along.

With him, all wrapped up in fur, went Miss Alice Campbell, of Evanston, Ill., making the trip by virtue of a popularity contest. The present altitude record for a flight of the kind is held by Germany at 24,672 feet. Capt. Moore flew an inland sport plane with Warner Power.

Besides the trophy donated by Charles E. Thompson, Cleveland manufacturer, Holman won $5,000 in the big speed event, Haizlip received $3,000 and Howard $2,000.

With the many other winners of the 10-day meet they were lined up in the evening for the presentation. Race officials handed over more than $100,000 in checks, and many trophies changed hands.

Mrs. O'Donnell Big Winner.

Gladys O'Donnell, mother of two children in Long Beach, Calif., collected one of the largest totals. She won the women's derby from her home city last week, placed first in several races and crowned her flying skill with victory in the 50-mile race for the Mrs. Robert R. McCormick trophy today.

Al Williams, Brooklyn stunt flier, who entertained through the meet with the aid of an international team, was awarded the Barber and Baldwin merit trophy for the most meritorious flying.

The throng saw Ruth Nichols, of Rye, N. Y., narrowly avert a crash.

Plane Is Disqualified.

Miss Nichols was about to overtake Phoebe Omlie, of Memphis, Tenn., on the second lap, near the home pylon. The two planes swerved together as they were about to turn. Miss Nichols cut sharply to the left, missed the pylon and was disqualified.

Mrs. Haizlip gave officials some concern as she turned the pylons so sharply that her plane all but rolled upon its back at a low altitude. She was flying a Cessna plane for the second time in her life, and it was her second experience in closed-course racing.

Mrs. O'Donnell's skill at staying close to the pylons for her turns contributed much to her victory. Her average speed was 149.90 miles per hour and her time for the race was 20 minutes 8-10 second. Mrs. Haizlip averaged 148.42 miles an hour, and Mrs. Kunz maintained a speed of 145.76 miles.

Howard Wins His Fifth Race.

Ben O. Howard, of St. Louis, won his fifth consecutive race today, a 50-mile free-for-all, limited to motors of 650 cubic inch piston displacement or less.

William Ong, of Wichita, Kans., was second, and E. V. Newsome, of Little Rock, Ark., third.

A. Hardgrave, of Kansas City, Mo., flying an inland sport plane, won the last sportsmanship pilot race of the meet for motors with maximum of 450 cubic inch piston displacement, averaging 119.35 miles an hour for the 25 miles.

(Associated Press.)

Capt. Arthur H. Page, jr., injured during the Thompson Trophy race at Chicago yesterday, is one of the best-known fliers in the Marine Corps, being the winner of the Curtiss Marine Trophy race in Washington recently.

Flying from Omaha to the Navy Field here last June, he set a record for "blind flight." He sat in a hooded cockpit and was guided by radio and his instruments.

A native of Minnesota, he graduated from the Naval Academy in 1917 and entered the Marine Corps. His mother lives in New York.

Tailless Airplane Ends Test Flights

Experiments of Craft Are Featured by Landing Speed of 22 Miles.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 1 (A.P.).—R. V. Waters, president of the Greater Miami Airport Association, announced that two successful flights were made today by Maj. B. L. Smith with an airplane without a tail which was made here.

Construction of the plane had received attention and support from Glenn H. Curtiss, pioneer aviator, before his recent death.

Low landing speed featured the performances today, Mr. Waters said, the airplane, known as a motor glider, coming to earth at speeds of 22 and 25 miles an hour. The plane is novel in that wings are set in a "V" shape and there s no tail. Ot is powered with a 30-horsepower motor and rides on three wheels, one under the engine and one under the end of each wing. Mr. Waters said today's flights were at altitudes ranging from 500 to 800 feet.

WRECK, KILLING SIX, HAS OFFICIALS SPLIT

Police Chief Denies Stones Were Piled in Path of Texas Special.

CORONOR BLAMES THUG

St. Louis, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Officials of St. Louis County disagreed tonight on the cause of the wreck of the Texas Special, fast St. Louis-San Francisco passenger train, near Osage Hills Station, 10 miles southwest of here, last night. Six persons were killed in the wreck and 58 injured, 11 seriously.

Dr. John O'Connell, coroner of St. Louis County, said the wreck had been caused by several large stones placed on the right-hand rail at a point about 500 feet east of Osage Hills Station.

Chief of Police George D. Schroeder, of Kirkwood, the first person to arrive at the scene of the wreck, said his investigation did not reveal any evidence the wreck was caused by a pile of stones.

"I have found absolutely no evidence of vandalism," Schroeder said. "The cowcatcher of the locomotive bears no evidence of having struck an obstruction."

Coroner Asks Aid.

Coroner O'Connell tonight asked Sheriff Lill and Prosecuting Attorney Castlen to assist in the investigation.

"Whether stones were placed on the rail by some moron, or by children at play, or some person holding a grudge against the railroad, or possibly by train robbers, has not been determined," O'Connell said. "We will investigate every phase in an effort to learn the truth."

Railroad officials claimed to have definite evidence that the 12-coach passenger train carrying about 200 passengers was purposely wrecked by the placing of one or more large stones on one of the rails on a long curve.

One theory they advanced was that the deed might be traceable to boys who wanted to see a train wreck. They revealed that recently a stone was hurled into the cab of another locomotive at the same place where last night's wreck occurred.

No arrests were made today, but reports were that investigators were quietly questioning persons in the vicinity of the disaster.

Evidence will be submitted at an inquest to be conducted Wednesday morning by County Coroner O'Donnell.

Frisco officials said examination of the rails at the point where the locomotive left the track revealed several fragments of stone and powdered rock which appeared to have been part of one huge stone. Physical evidence showed that wheels of the engine had left the rails at this point, shearing off bolts which connected two lengths of rail.

This, Frisco executives said, established that the wreck was a deliberate act and was either a youthful prank, a malicious deed, or the work of an insane person.

Identification of the dead and injured and work of clearing the wreckage was virtually completed today. One official estimated the railroad's loss, including payment of damage claims, could reach $1,000,000.

The dead are Charles E. Ray, 52; of Maplewood, St. Louis suburb, engineer; Ernest T. White, 45, Maplewood, fireman; Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Newton, the former an employe of the Postoffice Department, at Washington, D. C.; Melchoir Arambula, 25, a laborer, St. Louis, and Miss Louise Davis, 19, of Fordland, Mo.

Eleven passengers remained in hospitals today. Forty-seven others reported minor injuries which did not require hospital treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton and their 4-year-old son, who was seriously injured, were on their way to the home of Mr. Newton's father at Marshfield, Mo., to pass their vacation.

WORK ON BRIDGE

COULD YOU HAVE DONE BETTER?

In the above hand East and West could pass every time. The bidding in Auction Bridge would be: South one Club and North one Heart; at contract it would be: South one Club, North two Hearts, South three Hearts and North four Hearts.

When the hand was played with North the Declarer and Hearts the contract, a Diamond was led by East and taken by the Ace in dummy. Two rounds of trumps left the adversaries with one winner, and then North led the Eight of Clubs and the finesse was taken by playing South's Trey. The Jack of Clubs followed and again a successful finesse, and then a third Club forced West's good trump.

West then led the Queen of Diamonds and shifted to the King of Spades as dummy had no more Diamonds. That settled the fate of the Declarer. He was obliged to lose two Spades because, although he could take the trick, he could not get dummy in the lead to cash two good Clubs; so the Declarer lost one Heart, two Spades and one Diamond, and failed to make his contract.

Could you have done better?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

The play was all right up to the point where North led after winning the second Club trick. Then the Declarer, knowing that the King of Clubs would fall on the next round, should have led a losing trump on the winning adverse trump, but keeping a Club entry so that when the adversaries led a Spade, North could win with the Ace and put dummy in to run the two good Clubs. In that way the Declarer will make five-odd.

INDOOR AND OUTDOOR GARDENS

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

I HAVE a plant of which I am inclosing a leaf. Can you name the plant and tell me whether it is a house plant or whether it is better suited for garden decoration? On the back of the leaves are small insects resembling tufts of cotton. What do you suggest to get rid of these pests? Also the plant as it stands is only one straight stem, not even one branch which might add to its beauty.

MRS. M. M.

Your plant is a coleus, a variety of summer bedding plant. It is really an annual which can be grown indoors or out. It demands a great deal of sun and water at all times. To induce the plant to become more spreading in its habits, the center of each shoot should be pinched out every three or four weeks. Spray the plant with nicotine solution and you will soon rid it of the mealy bug.

Please suggest a remedy for the worms which are eating all my rhubarb leaves and later the stems as well. Some of the roots are even being destroyed. Also tell me what is the cause of the leaves of my hardy ferns turning brown on the tips. The young leaves are black in the center for a distance of three inches. My gooseberries appear to be healthy, but fail to set buds of fruit. —V. McP.

All you can do to banish worms from a rhubard patch is to use a poison bait. If you care to write again and inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I shall be glad to send you the name of a proprietary preparation that will aid you in getting rid of these pests. The following formula is for a poison bait which you can make yourself. Keep in mind that this material is poison and therefore must be kept out of the reach of children or other irresponsible persons.

Poison Bait.

Paris green or white arsenic, one ounce.
Bran (dry), one peck or five pounds.
Molasses or sirup, four fluid ounces.
Water, one-half pint.

First mix the white arsenic and dry bran. In another vessel stir the molasses and water together. Then prepare a mash by slowly adding the mixture of molasses and water to the poisoned bran. Allow it to stand several hours to allow the bran to take up the arsenic. Scatter thinly over the surface of the soil along the rows of plants after sundown. Ferns likely need transplanting and dividing. Prune gooseberries severely.

I have several regale lilies about which I would like some information. Last year one of the bulbs had a lovely bloom, but this year the bud has dried up and the other bulbs show no sign of bloom and do not look thrifty. I used bonemeal as fertilizer and have kept them watered in dry weather.

MISS MARTHA B. G.

Better spray the bulbs this fall and again in early spring with bordeaux mixture. Also dig some dry mixture into the soil. It might be well to transplant the bulbs, surrounding each bulb with some sand. Sometimes worms are responsible for such a condition.

Dare Interprets the Mode

Paris, September 1.

"NOW just what good is THAT!"

Roars the hundred per cent American male, holding up before his outraged gae a sheer whiff of dainty nothing-at-all-ness by its lacy corner.

"No good at all," the Lovely Lady answers sweetly. "What good is an orchid?"

Whereupon the h.p. American male will probably mutter darkly something that sounds like "uump . . . hay-fever . . . g-r-o-w-l—'fluenza!" (h. p. meaning hundred per cent, not high-powered).

Have Place in History

Whereupon the Lovely Lady but smiles mysteriously and rescues her dainty little hankafuff from his disrespectful clutches.

And what do you bet that before the evening is over he hasn't asked her for it as a souvenir?

For nothing so expresses the personality and refinement of its owner as does a dainty and individual handkerchief. Handkerchiefs and fans tread the pages of history together, and don't think for a moment that only Miladi appreciated the former.

Important in Olden Days

Masculine elegantes flaunted highly belated handkerchiefs in the days of both the Italian and the French Renaissance. And we even have evidence that the luxury-loving Romans "mopped their brows with embroidered squares the value of which might have ransomed a toiling slave."

Nor need a handkerchief necessarily be useful, any more than jewelry or flowers. But it must be lovely!

• • • •

And you would simply have to carry a lovely handkerchief with a dress like the one I sketched for you today in green georgette, now wouldn't you just? It was an Yteb model, and so flattering to the figure, which is exactly what a truly modern gown ought to be.

• • • •

But a modern accessory for winter ought to be furred—and just the very minute we found that out, we dug up all the old fur things we could find in cellar, attic and neighborhood, and experimented with them to see what we could do ourselves in the fur accessory line.

And what we could do was plenty, as you can very easily find out by just sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet. Go to your writing desk this minute before it slips your mind, and find out for yourself how easy it is, and how adorable tiny hats, purses, belts, gloves, cuffs and jewelry made of fur can be.

• • • •

Those modernistic pins! Honestly, I am always seeing one that I just can't leave without sketching for you like the one illustrated for you today, for instance, which was made of glass, imitation diamonds called strass, and turquoise. Can't you just see it serving as a buckle or as a shoulder broche?

Behind the Screens

With NELSON B. BELL

A LONG-STANDING suspicion that a college education is not a prime essential in achieving success as a screen player now seems possible of corroboration by statistics.

Eleven football players from institutions of higher learning all over the United States were recently imported to Hollywood by a film company to do their gridiron stuff for a picture. Only one out of the eleven has been held in the celluloid capital for work in other productions. He is William Banker, a Tulane half back, who has been cast in "Barber John's Boy."

Several years ago First National, I think it was, conducted a college boy contest, as a result of which ten typical rah-rahs were taken to the West Coast to be made into movie actors. Today, I am informed, only one of that group is left, and he is only acting occasionally.

An obvious conclusion, therefore, is that only one college man out of ten is endowed with what it takes to set the cameras on fire.

An oldtimer is back directing two-reel comedies, although you will never guess his real identity from the name flashed upon the screen—when, and if, his name ever is flashed upon the screen.

There was a time when this clever funster packed theaters throughout the world with his own ridiculous antics, and then on a certain other Labor Day years ago he stepped off on the wrong foot in San Francisco and has been persona non grata to the industry and the public ever since. While shrouded in complete obscurity as far as a screen "name" is concerned, this thoroughly competent workman, in his own field, has frequently been called in as an expert "gag man," comedy constructor or director.

If he should happen to be given credit now for anything that he has done, it would be as "William Goodrich," although, of course, you have guessed that it is Roscoe Arbuckle of whom we are speaking.

In running back over the many fine directorial touches in the new audible version of Alice Duer Miller's "Manslaughter," current at the RKO-Keith Theater, it seems to me that one of the most effective devices that George Abbott has employed is to indicate the mental impressions suffered by Lydia Thorne, after she has accidentally killed the traffic officer, by sound rather than the old-fashioned, silent multiple-exposure method.

To be sure, when the case comes to trial Lydia's mental reactions to her unaccustomed surroundings are indicated by both multiple-exposure flashes on the screen and a correspondingly bewildering cacophony of dissonant noises, but it is that high-pitched and insistent feminine accusation that keeps persistently ringing in the ears of the spectator as well as of the accused.

An exceedingly vivid touch.

And if you'd care for a little whatwhatting:

What delegate to the managers-musicians first conclave in New York never left his hotel room, but relied entirely upon his telephone between tugs at the tankard?

What rageteer is "that way" about what publicist?

What theater executive adopted a daytime diet of double duty and ditto cocoa-colas until the old blood-count was about the reverse of what it should be?

What managing director is going to stage a benefit for two lads laboring—and suffering under an insuperable handicap?

What downtown houses are contemplating cutting entrances through to F street?

What new building project, or projects, will incorporate one or more theaters in the downtown area?

What ho! What fun!! What t'ell!!!

Odd, what a yen to get in the movies will lead to.

A gallery of queer shapes probably is the strangest exhibit in a unique collection of portraits that is to be found as a part of the equipment of any well ordered casting studio in Hollywood. Not Quasimodos, mind you, but slight variations from normal, nevertheless.

Here are catalogued a long list of men who started [illegible] human forms divine, but sideslipped!

There are the too [illegible] he too lean and those who are lean in spots and fat in places.

There are the broad and the narrow, the long-necked and the short-necked, the round-shouldered and the sway-backed.

Not deformities at all, but the vagaries of nature in fashioning people so that no two are exactly alike, and some are more conspicuously different than others.

Far from being incensed at being on these rosters of "American business men, odd shapes," the average extra, or "bit" player, is eager to join the collection.

It insures his being called when his type is needed in a picture—and all he has to do is keep himself out of shape until the call comes!

Shades of Gehenna and last July! Is that 110 degrees business going to start all over again?

You are in the midst of shadows on this date, and are surrounded by hazardous influences. Do not run risks of any kind, materially or physically. Do not believe half you hear! Wicked tongues will be loosed.

The children born on this September 2 will be strong willed and stubborn, and will insist upon the whys and wherefores of everything. They will make excellent students, and take a pride in their work. They will be very unemotional as far as their affections are concerned.

You will receive and deserve many of life's bounties, for you are honest and honorable in your payments. You are anxious and ready to give more than you receive. You have many real friends, but your friendships are earned through your own loyalty, sympathy, understanding and good palship with others. Your friends like you for what you are and not for what you have. You are ambitious, but are not a wish-monger. You probably have one or two overpowering desires, for which you will go without everything else if need be in order to achieve them. In comparison, all other things are side alleys of interest. You are wise enough and strong enough to cut your losses, and to push on. You are not in the habit of looking back; your thoughts are usually turned toward the future.

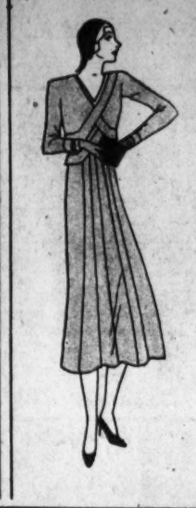

You profit, but are not downed by bitter experiences—you soon rid yourself of any sips of gall. You are not too serious-minded to miss the laughter and fun which life has to offer you, but your pleasures are never allowed to interfere with your conscientious duties. To both work and play, you give your whole heart and mind—you are stupid and lethargic in no phase of your life.

You have ability for literary and scientific employments. You have to make yourself proficient in both spelling and mathematics.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

Parents Utterly Indifferent.

WE recently published a letter from a girl of 15 who wanted to know how much kissing she should permit a boy in order to hold his interest without losing his respect. Her letter, despite the innocence of its question was so very sophisticated, and showed so plainly the extent of the child's erotic experience despite her tender years, that we asked all mothers to comment upon its contents, and also to tell us what they felt on the subject of having instruction in high schools on the subject of sex. We will therefore begin today to publish the letters of those mothers who have volunteered to reply.

The first letter is from a mother who happens also to have been a teacher. She states very truthfully that parents are utterly casual about everything concerning their children—except their physical care. There speaks the teacher! And how the teacher knows that crass indifference of the parent. Johnnie must wear his rubbers and devour the requisite vitamins. But he may devour any sort of vicious information in the form of unfit literature, may stock his mind forever and taint his thoughts for all time, but he "will outgrow that." Boys and girls do not "outgrow" tragic experiences. On the contrary, these are the basis for the dread complex of adult life.

Dear Miss McDonald: In your column recently you asked what we parents think of promiscuous experiences for our adolescent children. I speak as a mother and a teacher. Such a situation as the one referred to is appalling. The responsibility rests not entirely on the parents, nor on the schools, though these are primarily to blame, but on the present-day sex madness. Our children meet it in moving pictures, popular novels, cheap sensational magazines, everywhere they turn. Much of this is due, in turn, to recent morbid psychological theories which have been more widely exploited than they deserve.

Not until parents realize the incalculable harm that is being done by this wholesale worship of sex and take time and trouble to help their children into a normal and balanced attitude toward these matters will there be any improvement, I fear. And as the average parent is utterly casual and indifferent toward all but the physical needs of his children, that day is a long way off.

Your column is a wonderful help in so many ways, I believe it will prove to be in this. MRS. A. H. C.

What Your Telephone Dollars Buy

The money you spend for your telephone does not buy the actual instrument. What then, DO you buy?

You buy service—constant, twenty-four hour service. Whether you are calling across the street or across the continent, the service is waiting for you—always ready.

You buy knowledge and experience that have taken years to acquire, and directed toward the single end that you may pick up your telephone and get the one other telephone you want out of more than 29,000,000 throughout the world.

You buy human devotion—loyalty that never wavers no matter what the emergency. The history of the telephone is filled with stories of men and women who have performed far beyond the line of duty, that the service might not falter.

These are the things your telephone dollars bring to you, things that cannot be measured in terms of price.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

FEVER AND MILK.

THE prevalence of undulant fever among farmers and people who live in towns and small cities is additional proof that we must soon come to pasteurization of milk on the farm and in the small dairies of the towns. If this were the universal practice there would be a moderate reduction in the prevalence of typhoid fever and tuberculosis and a great reduction in diarrheal diseases among babies. There are reasons enough for asking the farmer to pasteurize the milk that his family consumes and for having the small dairyman install a pasteurizing plant. This would not be feasible, however advantageous it would be, if pasteurizing in a small way required an expensive plant or was expensive or troublesome to carry out.

Many years ago Dr. C. E. North demonstrated that milk could be pasteurized by setting a 10-gallon can of it in a pot of hot water. He specified the temperature of the water and the length of time required for the milk to reach 140 and how long the can was to remain in the hot water. This method required no equipment except a vat and a hot-water boiler.

At one time a simple, inexpensive pasteurizer selling for about one to two hundred dollars was on the market. Perhaps one of this general type is still available. A family can use a vacuum bottle or vacuum jug as a pasteurizer. The milk is heated to, say, 140 and then placed in the vacuum bottle or jug and left there for one hour or more. It is removed and chilled. Milk can be heated to this temperature without harming the cream line. This temperature, maintained for one hour, will kill any of the ordinary disease-producing bacteria.

Streptococci are killed by a temperature of 129 maintained for one-half minute. Diphtheria bacilli are killed by the same heat and time exposure. Typhoid bacilli are killed by a temperature of 132 for 30 minutes. Tubercle bacilli by 138 for 30 minutes. The bacillus of undulant fever by a temperature of 131 for one hour. The proposed 140 for one hour, therefore, offers a considerable factor of safety.

RESUSCITATION METHOD.

G. D. writes: Please send me a description of the Schafer method of resuscitation.

REPLY.

This is also known as the prone pressure method of resuscitation. It is described in all books on first-aid, being the preferred method for performing artificial respiration.

The patient lies front downward and face turned to one side, with mouth and nose unobstructed. Operator kneels, straddling patient and facing his head. Hands grasp the lower rib region, thumbs along and near backbone, fingers around sides of chest, and arm stiff. Operator throws his weight forward and with a straight arm jab compresses the patient's chest. He then raises up, releasing the pressure on the chest. The released chest wall expands and draws air into the lungs. After an interval, repeat. This is done sixteen times a minute with regular, even movements and rhythm.

FORM OF CAR SICKNESS.

E. F. T. writes: Why do I get dizzy if I read while riding on a street car?

REPLY.

This is a mild form of car sickness. Eyestrain is a factor. The easiest way out is not to read while riding.

NATS BEAT RED SOX TWICE, 2-1 AND 6-3, BEFORE 20,000; MACKS DIVIDE WITH YANKS; LEAD CUT TO 5½ GAMES

Westbrook Pegler Says

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Sept. 1.—Recent events give rise to a premonition that the legislatures which legalized prize fighting in various states under ornate supervisory arrangements in the last ten years presently will withdraw this sanction, relegate the business to its natural, outlaw status and set the police on the boys. That always has been the way of it.

When the devil is sick, the devil a monk would be, as in that period just after the war when the boys made pious promises not to cheat, fake or chisel and his honor, James J. Walker, then the Tammany leader in the New York legislature, impressed by all this, and a natural enthusiast anyway, put through the New York prize fighting law.

I recall an elaborate public luncheon at the old Waldorf hotel about the time that Mr. Walker's bill of amnesty was passed restoring the prize fight trade to citizenship in the State of New York after a long spell of penance, poverty, and shame. The luncheon was spread at the expense of a list of prosperous suckers who had been lured into a grandiose paper organization called the International Sporting club, which was to exert a fine moral influence in the racket and preserve it from the foul schemes of greedy and dishonest mercenaries.

Georges Carpentier Guest.

Georges Carpentier, who had come t o the United States to meet Jack Dempsey on the Jersey side in the first of the million-dollar prize fights, was a guest at the board. Handsome and suave, and probably reflecting on the gullibility of those remarkable Americans.

When his honor arose to speak he fixed the company with a challenging glare and told them that he was giving the grand old game back to them only on condition that they keep it pure and chivalrous, and he wound up on a warning note, a threat to cancel it out again at the first evil act.

There were various sorts of people there, including notorious chiselers and a numerous delegation of those substantial but sporty rich men of the town who like to relax from the rigors of extreme social propriety in the company of the prize fight crowd. They listened gravely and the boys at whom his honor's threat was directed point blank tsared solemnly into their coffee and puddled their raspberry ice with their spoons.

It was not a jollification. The boys had been doing business in a fugitive way for small returns for several years, and it was fine to be admitted to open practice again. But Mr. Walker had dwelt long on the awful thought that one fake, one business fight, would undo it all again. This was serious.

I suppose Mr. Walker at the time really had some idea that under strict supervision the business could be kept as honest as, say, the profession of law or politics, which was not asking much. The men who were to be appointed commissioners were supposed to be independent, beholden to nobody socially or politically, and of such shrewd intelligence that no thieving or scheming, however petty, could escape detection and retribution.

Walker Addicted to Prize Fights.

Mr. Walker is a prize fight addict of such enthusiasm that even if he were still a song writer with no royal inclosure at his disposal at big fights, he would undoubtedly be found in the best seats he could buy from the scalpers. Feeling as he did about prize fighting, he undoubtedly had personal motives in restoring the prize fight business to the boys. He wanted to see some fights.

But the boys have made millions of dollars since then and when the devil is well, the devil of a monk is he.

The very grandeur of the business has been its worst handicap in the effort to go straight, for the tremendous returns have drawn into it a class of new boys with criminal tendencies and records who verify the dictum of the New York police inspector, Coughlin by name, who used to remark that the only reformed gangsters were in the graveyards.

The prize fight commissions everywhere, unable to regulate the racket, have turned over their authority and allowed the racket to regulate them. And, while I realize that this is a large generality, it is provable by numerous instances which have been set forth so many times in print as to be matters of common knowledge now. It is easy to be sanctimonious toward the prize fight racket, and because it is such a sucker for contempt I make the point that the wrongs which the customers suffer are not important and the whole business is nothing to become indignant about.

The customers generally know what to expect, when they pay their money, and if they needed the money

Ruffing Hurls 2-Hit Game; Wins, 2-0

72,000 Watch Grove Fan Ruth As A's Triumph, 3-2.

Simmons' Home Run With One On Features Opener.

By G. W. (MONITOR) DALEY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—More than 72,000 fans, the banner crowd of the year, saw the Yankees and the world's champion Philadelphia Athletics divide their holiday double-header today in two of the best-pitched games of the season.

Al Simmons won the first game by a home run with a man on base, the score being 3 to 2, while Charlie Ruffing, the Norse giant of the Yankees, blanked the champions with two hits to carry off the second, 2 to 0.

There hasn't been a crowd like that in the stadium since it rose from the Harlem marshes in 1923, except on one occasion, September 9, 1928, when they actually turned folks away from a double-header between the same two teams on which the fate of the pennant hung that year. No one was turned away today, but there were few vacant places in all the broad expanse of bleachers and grand stand, and thousands stood up behind the seats in all three decks rather than search for less advantageous spots.

Ball Games Were Befitting Crowd.

The games were befitting the great outpouring. George Pipgras actually did the better pitching against two Athletic stalwarts, Walbert and Mahaffey, in the first game. He allowed only five hits, but the fatal one was the blow by Simmons. And when the Yankees seriously threatened in the late innings, Robert Moses Grove, prize southpaw of the American League, came forth to strike out Babe Ruth with two runners on the bases and save the battle.

Ruth was treated rather unjustly by the crowd when he struck out on that occasion and two times later in the day. He was in the game on his nerve, for he is still suffering with the wrenched back which laid him low in Washington, and plainly isn't in condition to swing at the ball properly.

Ruth Does Day's Work.

But he did manage to drive in the first run for his side in the first game and he scored the second. Also, he drove in the clinching run in the great battle between Ruffing and Earnshaw in the second game.

The haze and murk of the second game were just suited to the speed of Messrs. Ruffing and Earnshaw. The Yankee redhead had no difficulty locating the plate, however, while Earnshaw practically tossed away the game by giving bases on balls to the eagle-eyed Combs on two occasions. On the first pass in the third inning Combs went to third on a safe bunt by Lary and a sacrifice fly by Gehrig, and then ran home on a wild pitch by Earnshaw, one of the wildest of the summer, for it hit the grandstand netting on the fly.

The other time Combs reached first was in the fifth, and he was sacrificed to second by Lary again. This time Ruth found the ball for a line single into right, which scored the unneeded run.

Ruffing's Victory Masterpiece.

Ruffing pitched one of his picture games. Cochrane and Boley made the two hits scored against him, both

ARNOLD WINS IN ALTOONA CLASSIC

Auto Test Is Shortened to 116 Miles by Downpour.

ALTOONA SPEEDWAY, Altoona, Pa., Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Billy Arnold, young Chicago speed king, won the Labor Day race on the board oval here today, finishing ahead of Deacon Litz, of Dubois, Pa., after a thrilling duel. The event was scheduled for 200 miles, but was stopped after 116¼ miles when the rain, which had threatened to postpone the race from the start, broke into a heavy shower and made completion dangerous and impossible

Arnold completed the 116¼ miles in 1 hour and 1 minute. An average of 113 miles an hour The victory gave him 139 points and increased his season total to 1,027. Shorty Cantlon, of Akron, Ohio, his nearest rival for the 1930 A. A. A. championship, won 104 points by placing third today and increased his season total to 584.

Victory Gives Arnold 1930 Title.

Ted Allen, secretary of the A. A. A. contest board, said Arnold's triumph today guaranteed him the 1930 title, since Cantlon, by winning the remaining official event at Syracuse next Saturday, could add only 120 points and could not overtake Arnold.

The shower which terminated the race today broke up a duel between Arnold and Litz which had the crowd of about 30,000 excited from start to finish. Arnold set the pace from the moment Starter Jack Rose sent the field away. He averaged 120 miles an hour during the first 50 miles, a speed which only Litz was able to match. The other ten starters were gradually outdistanced until the third place position over which Lou Meyer, Cantlon and Russ Berger fought was soon one mile and later nearly three miles behind the leader.

Litz twice sent the spectators to their feet when his efforts to overtake Arnold were coupled with "breaks" which endangered his life. On the fiftieth lap of the 1¼-mile track, the "Deacon" was just about to pass Billy when Litz's machine skidded and shot into the dirt on the eastern turn. The incident, aside from thrilling the crowd, had no effect on the duel and Litz was immediately in Arnold's wake.

Accident Helps Arnold Regain Lead.

Litz gained the lead a few minutes later when Arnold went into the pit to change his left front tire. He lost it about ten laps later through his second mishap at the eastern turn.

Litz's right front tire blew as he was coming out of the turn. His car skidded into the dirt, swung completely around while the crowd gasped, and was finally righted by superb driving and was piloted into the pit. The tire change cost Litz nearly a lap and he resumed the race about a mile behind Arnold, who had regained the lead.

From then on Arnold slowly pulled ahead of the dirt-covered Litz car

Gar Wood Retains His Title; Second British Boat Falters

Miss Carstairs Surrenders Wheel to Hawker. Tanks Collapse After 4 Laps; U. S. Driver Sets Record.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The third and final attempt of Marion Barbara Carstairs, courageous young English sportswoman, to beat Gar Wood in a Harmsworth trophy race, ended in failure when Wood piloted his Miss America IX to an easy victory in the final heat of that classic today. As was the case in the first heat of the race Saturday, the British challenger, Estelle IV came to grief when its fuel tanks collapsed and Wood was not even pressed by the British boat.

Wood, heading a team of three boats, covered the 30-mile course at an average speed of 77.390 miles an hour, which betters his former record for the Harmsworth of 75.287 made last year.

Estelle IV with Bert Hawker at the wheel, performed well for four laps and then suddenly dropped out. Accepting a tow to his boathouse Hawker reported that Estelle IV's tanks had collapsed just as did those of Estelle V, in the third lap Saturday.

Miss America VIII, driven by George Wood, finished second today and took the credit of having made today's fastest lap, at a speed of 79.185 miles an hour.

Before the second heat today, Miss Carstairs, who has spent approximately $500,000 in her effort during the last three years to recapture for England the trophy that symbolizes the world's speedboat championship, announced definitely that she would not again challenge for the Harmsworth trophy.

In a last heroic effort to beat Wood, Miss Carstairs surrendered any personal ambition she may have had and gave her place at the wheel of Estelle IV to Bert Hawker, with instructions to force the Wood brothers to the utmost, or "crack up Estelle IV if necessary to do it."

Apparently Hawker followed orders for the crack-up came in the fifth lap and it was the same kind of a breakdown that befell the Estelle V when Hawker had it wide open in the first heat Saturday.

British Have Better Luck Here.

The British had better luck in another international race today. Hubert Scott-Paine drove his Miss Britain I to a point-score victory in the Detroit News Trophy race for 5½-liter hydroplanes. Miss Britain I and The Phantom, of Houston, Tex., driven by Frank Robertson, engaged in a thrilling battle in the second

Lott and Doeg Are Upset As Eastern Stars Triumph

By TED VOSBURGH.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 1 (A. P.).—Overturning the national doubles champions, George Lott and Johnny Doeg, a surprisingly powerful team of Eastern tennis stars, defeated the West by a count of three matches to two in the annual interesctional series today before a gallery of 1,500.

The West proved weakest where it was thought to be strongest and Doeg and Lott were beaten in singles as well as doubles. The star of the winning team was hard-hitting Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J. This sturdy, curly-haired Georgetown University senior personally accounted for Doeg in straight sets, 6—2, 6—4, and paired with Johnny Van Ryn, of East Orange, N. J., to turn back the Lott-Doeg combination, 3—6, 6—3, 8—6.

Shields Beats Lott in Straight Sets.

Lott also was trounced in straight sets by Frank Shields, 6—3, 6—2, the young New York giant decisively outplaying the Chicago star, who shared with Bill Tilden the Davis Cup singles assignment against the French.

The outstanding player for the West was Berkeley Bell, lithe little human dynamo from Austin, Tex., who defeated J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., 6—2, 4—6, 6—3, in singles and then joined forces with 18-year-old Ellsworth Vines, of Pasadena, Calif., to overcome Shields and Hall, 6—4, 6—4.

In fact Bell and Mangin, the ninth and tenth ranking players of the country and alternates on the Davis Cup Team, outshone the more highly-rated Lott and Doeg.

Bell, in fine fettle, gave the West a flying start by means of a hard-won victory over Hall in the opening match. The fighting Texan was all over the court, often sprawling at full length on the slippery turf, but continually pulling off acing shots from seemingly impossible positions. His service was at his best and he wound up the match with three straight aces.

Mangin at Top of Game in Beating Doeg.

Then came the Doeg-Mangin encounter and apparently an excellent chance for the West to even the count. But Mangin was playing at the top of his game and under his furious pounding Doeg developed a decided weakness on the backhand. Doeg's famous cannonball service was handled smoothly by the New Jersey star, whose own delivery proved a

REDS DEFEAT CUBS TWICE, 5-0 AND 2-1

Lucas Blanks Leaders With 3 Hits in Opener.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The Cincinnati Reds dealt a stunning blow to Chicago's hope of sewing up the National League race soon by taking a Labor Day double header and leaving the Cubs only four games ahead of the field. Scores were 5 to 0 and 2 to 1.

The Cubs had the second game won, 1 to 0, with two down in the ninth inning, when one of baseball's worst breaks went against Hack Wilson. Sukeforth's hit to center bounced wierdly over Wilson's head and went for a triple, scoring Stripp and Crawford, who had walked.

The first game was a victory for Red Lucas, who gave the Cubs only three hits and shut them out. His teammate, Frey, did almost as well in the second game, lettting the Cubs down with five hits, although Osborn did just as well for Chicago. The Reds could not find him from the first inning to the sixth.

Favorites Win Matches In U. S. Girls Tourney

Philadelphia, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The first and second seeded stars, defending champion and runner-up last year, advanced with little effort in the girl's national tennis championships today on the grass courts of the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Sarah Palfrey, Brookline, Mass., winner of the national crown both last September and the previous season, lost only one game to Millicent Hirsch, New York, in the first round.

Helen Marlowe, Los Angeles, Calif., runner-up to Miss Palfrey in 1929, was the first player to enter the third round. She eliminated Jules Parks, New York, 6—0, in their second round match.

Phyllis Bowes, Philadelphia, turned in a 6—2, 6—2 victory over Louise Heary, Philadelphia, in a first-round match.

In first-round matches Barbara Christy, Montclair, N. J., won from Alice Fraser, Glencoe, Ill., by default; Dorothy Workman, California, defeated Katherine Wonthrop, Boston, 6—4, 6—3; Mercedes Marlowe, California, defeated Eleanor Steiner, East Orange, N. J., 6—1, 6—0; Helen Fulton, Chicago, defeated Cecilia Bowes, Philadelphia, 6—2, 6—1, and Charlotte Baker, Cleveland, defeated Elizabeth Packer, Boston, 6—1, 6—0.

the second single-handed, including both pitching and batting.

Cronin's biggest contribution staved off a ninth-inning tie and possible defeat in the opening engagement, the shortstop making what was easily the greatest play seen here in recent years. With the Nats leading, 2 to 1, and Webb on third with two out, Bob Reeves shot a high liner toward short. Cronin made a leap for it, the ball bounding in the air off the tips of his fingers. As he was falling, the "San Francisco Keed" saw the ball dropping near him, and he grabbed it with his gloved hand extended at arm's length, transferring it to his other hand, so the umpire could see it while literally balanced on his head and one shoulder. His other gem was a theft of home in the eighth after previously having doubled Manush over the plate in the eighth inning of the second game.

Brown, in turning in his sixteenth victory of the season and the Nats' fifteenth out of eighteen over the Red Sox, did his stuff in answer to the fans' prayers. Just about the time he was called into action, the scoreboard showed that the Yankees had beaten the Athletics in the second game of their holiday bill. "Now, let's get these guys" was yelled to the Johnsons from all sections of the stands. And the Nats, and particularly "Brownie," did.

Brown Pulls Out Of Hole.

The young southpaw relieved Marberry with none out and aliens on third and first in the seventh and pulled out of the hole unscathed, following with hitless innings in the eighth and ninth. In the home seventh with two gone and the Nats still one run behind, he picked out one to his liking and crashed out a homer to the left of the scoreboard, giving his team a lead which it never relinquished.

Horace Lisenbee, former Nat, opposed Crowder in the opener and gave him a real battle, while Fred Marberry, back after a long lay-off due to a fractured wrist, started for the Nats in the second, with Ed (Bull) Durham, a young right-hander, opposing him. Neither granted many hits, but most of those they did allow cost them runs.

The opener, with Cronin's great catch as a climax, was as thrilling a game as has been seen in Griffith Stadium this season, with the result in doubt until the very end. Crowder and Lisenbee granted the same number of hits—seven—and but for Cronin's highway robbery stunt at Reeves' expense to end the game the two teams might be battling yet, for Webb was on third at the time with the tying run. It was this sensational stop which gave Crowder his edge in the mound duel.

Washington Scores Early.

Washington's runs came during the first half of the game, Hayes' triple and Ruel's single netting the first in rowdi 3, while a walk to Judge, his theft, and singles by Harris and Spencer made the Johnsons 2 up in the fourth. There had been no other native threats.

Meanwhile, the Red Sox did not get a man past first until they scored in the seventh, the ingredients of this marker being a double by Webb and a triple by Reeves, these coming in succession with only one dead. Crowder pitched out of this hole by forcing Todt to pop to Bluege and by fanning Pinch-hitter Rothrock.

A double-play prevented Lisenbee's single from doing the Sox any good in the eighth and then they gave the Nats and the cash customers their scare. Wth two dead, Webb tripled to left-center and it looked as though

FIRST GAME.

BOTH teams opened the game with singles to left, Oliver for Red Sox and Rice for the Nationals, and neither of these blows helped anything but the stick averages of the hitters.

Cronin went to short center to make a sensational over-the-shoulder catch of Berry's near Texas leaguer opening the alien third.

Hayes' triple opening Washington's third was a hard-hit looper directly between the left and center fielders.

Reeves, former Nat, made a nice play on Bluege's slow roller in the third, having to use all of his throw-

BALKO, 136 POUNDS UP, BREAKS BELMONT RECORD

Six Furlongs Mark Set By Colt

Overcomes Interference to Win Race in 1:09 2-5.

The Heathen Second, Finite Third in Highweight.

BELMONT Park Race Track, N. Y., Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The ponies returned to Belmont Park after a month's absence at Saratoga and a big crowd, estimated at twenty thousand turned out to welcome back the thoroughbreds.

The fall highweight, six furlongs down the Widener course resulted in a victory for the Sagamore Stable's Balko which carried the crushing impost of 136 pounds, winning in a hard drive from the Heathen, with Finite third. The time, 1:09 2-5, is a new track record for the distance and stamps Balko as one of the best sprinters in the East today.

Balko in Splendid Condition.

Balko, who had a long let up, came back to the races in splendid condition and with his stable mate, the Heathen, was made the favorite at 17 to 10. At the start The Heathen bumped into Balko which made him away last. However, it did not materially interfere with the colt, as he moved up very fast and was soon in a contending position. Coming into the final furlong, Balko dashed to the front but was hard pressed by The Heathen. Balko won by a head. The Heathen beat Finite a length for the place. Finite suffered a lot of interference but closed gamely when clear.

The race was worth $3,375.

Siskin Wins Feature at Lincoln Fields.

Lincoln Fields, Chicago, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The Nevada Stock Farm's Siskin, carrying 125 pounds, beat a good field of 2-year-olds here today to take the Joliet Handicap, feature event of the Labor Day card. Schooner was second, four lengths in front of Rusty. The race was worth $6,460 to the winner, which ran the six furlongs in the good time of 1:11 4-5.

A field of eleven were kept at the post but a minute. When the barrier was sprung, Rusty was rushed into the lead, but under a poorly judged ride, swerved when tiring after reaching the home stretch. Morrison took Siskin to the inside after a poor start and worked his way up, passing the tiring Rusty at the turn into the stretch and heading Schooner, a forward factor from the start, won by a head. Schooner beat Rusty four lengths for the place. Don Leon the favorite in the betting was fourth.

Siskin paid $10.40 to $2 in the mutuels.

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)
—Lincoln Fields Selections—
By J. B. SNODGRASS

THE Chicago Beach Hotel Handicap features the Lincoln Fields card at Chicago today. This 6-furlong sprint brings out a small field of topnotchers, with BROWN WISDOM, the top weight, appearing much the best. These horses have been beating one another at times, but somehow BROWN WISDOM has a track record or so to his credit, and if he is off without delay, should carry his 124 pounds to victory.

CLUB HOUSE, which has displayed sensational speed, should be the contender. Third money seems to rest between ELLICE and CAYUGA. CAYUGA is inconsistent, but has much speed at times, and probably will get show money over the Camden filly. ELLICE likes a longer route. ZACAWEISTA occasionally turns in a good effort. NUSAKAN can run with this sort, but needs mud for his best effort.

FIRST RACE—The first race is a claiming affair for older horses, and there is no wide margin of choice among the platers contending. SHIFT is deemed the most likely winner, and is best on recent form LELAND has improved, but would do better at farther than 7 furlongs. ESTIN has lost some of his dazzling speed of other days, but should get in the money.

SECOND RACE—This also is a 7-furlong dash for claiming horses. The class is better than in the first race. BLACK FLYER is selected to win. He has beaten better fields than this, but is not partial to a fast track. GOVERNOR PRATT may be the contender. FANNIE MAY is almost certain of a place among the money horses. Third is the best rating she can be given.

THIRD RACE—This is an allowance affair for 2-year-old maidens at six furlongs. PORTCODINE appears to be about the best maiden running in the West, and if ready, should win brackets. BOREALIS will be well backed, and has next best chance. DARK DAWN, one of the Caldwell entry, may be dangerous, for the newcomer to racing from Nashville has had a successful season and starts with a good string of horses.

FIFTH RACE—The fifth race is the secondary feature. FLECHE D' ARGENT should win and may be at a long price, for Chicago may be unfamiliar with the imported streak of lightning, which beat a smart field at Saratoga. The distance will suit FLECHE D' ARGENT, and with 99 pounds, should not miss. UNCOMMON GOLD figures next best, with SUITOR calculated to get third money.

SIXTH RACE—FLAG LIEUTENANT is rated best in the sixth race, a claiming affair at a mile and a furlong, for older horses. On his last race, this looks like the spot for him. QUIBBLER will like the route, and may be dangerous. GRAND DAD seems best of the others.

SEVENTH RACE — HARAMZADA looks like almost a standout in the seventh number. BROAD AXE, which is not at his best form, may be the contender. WACKER DRIVE has a chance to be in the money. J. A. WEIL is another that has won from fields similar to this, and at the distance of a mile and a sixteenth.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BETTY ANN, $21.94, $7.94, $4.48; GOLD MINT, $4.98, $4.02; FAVORITE II, $5.80.

BETTY ANN had speed from the start, caused some crowding when she was taken across sharply approaching the turn and suffered when FAVORITE II swerved in the stretch, but gamely disposed of the latter and, holding on well, outstayed GOLD MINT. The latter, probably best and in very close quarters during the opening three-eighths, suffered mild interference when moving up fast thereafter and was rapidly getting to the winner. FAVORITE II had keen speed from the break, bore out badly after entering the stretch and weakened in drive. THE OKAH raced forwardly and saved ground the entire trip. NYMPH KING swerved repeatedly in his good effort and pulled up sore. THE TARTAR began slowly and closed fast.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For maiden 3-year-old fillies. Start bad. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:59. Off at 3:05½. Winner, J. Marsh's b. f. (2), by Supremus—Margaret O. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALFAYE B., $14.56, $6.76, $4.50; REGAL LADY, $4.54, $3.72; CHERRY MAY, $7.66.

ALFAYE B. had the most speed from the start, benefitted through good rating and, continuing well in the stretch, held the lead safe under mild pressure. REGAL LADY went predominantly from the start, suffered interference from CHERRY MAY in the stretch, but closed resolutely and outstayed CHERRY MAY. The latter was a forward factor throughout, moved up strongly on the inside in the stretch, bumped REGAL LADY and finished in close quarters. ALL GIRLS acted badly at the post, raced wide throughout and showed a fine effort. GENEROLA lost some ground. LIGHT STEP began in a tangle, lacked speed and was taken to outside on the turn and was always outrun. HAPPY HOLIDAY was taken back repeatedly when in close quarters and quit in the stretch. SCALA had early speed.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs Purse, $1,300; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:42½. Winner, Gallagher and Combs' ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY FINGERS, $7.34, $4.04, $3.18; FLAG BEARER, $5.50, $4.06; HOT SHOT, $3 02.

LADY FINGERS, lucky to escape the crowding and having speed from the start, forced the early pace under steadying reserve, easily disposed of FLAG BEARER and had something left. The latter began fast, saved ground on the pacemaking and held on fairly well, but was overmatched. HOT SHOT was in close quarters during the early stages, suffered severely when HOT TIME dropped back on the turn and closed with fine speed after going to the outside. RETORT began slowly, but closed fast. ILLEGITIMATE lost ground to the stretch and was in close quarters in the final drive.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $5,000 added. The Joliet Handicap. For 2-year-olds. Start good for all but Siskin. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:20½. Off at 4:21. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SISKIN, $10.40, $6.40, $4.04; SCHOONER, $12.16, $6.82; RUSTY, $4.28.

SISKIN, away poorly, luckily found room on the inside while working his way up, came a trifle wide for the stretch and, responding gamely under his impost, stood a severe drive resolutely and, heading SCHOONER, outstayed him. The latter was a forward factor from the start, saved much ground and, strongly ridden, held on stubbornly. RUSTY, taken into the lead, was rushed under a poorly judged ride and swerved when tiring after five-eighths. DON LEON raced prominently from the start, lost much ground during the opening three-eighths and weakened after reaching second place in the stretch. DORIS JEAN, crowded back, made up ground slowly and showed a fine effort. COUSIN JO had no mishaps. SUN DOT quit.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:01½. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JEM, $5.58, $4.04, $3.18; LADRONE, $5.10, $3.54; SEARINGTON, $4.08.

JEM, well ridden and having speed from the start, went to the front under strong reserve, easily drew away into a long lead and weakened, but outstayed LADRONE. The latter began slowly, benefited by the fast pace, saved ground when improving his position and finished in close quarters on the inside. SEARINGTON also began slowly, saved ground at the stretch turn and went gamely in final drive. OTILLA displayed speed from the start, saved ground to the stretch, then swerved when tiring.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,500. Labor Day Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:40. Off at 5:44½. Winner, R. Cardwell's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY BROADCAST, $3.58, $2.70, $2.24; PIGEON HOLE, $3.08, $2.36; HONEY LOCUST, $2.40.

LADY BROADCAST, fractious at the post, but away well, raced wide while forcing the pace in hand, suffered when SILVERDALE bore out entering stretch, but drew clear quickly and, holding on well, stalled off PIGEON HOLE. The latter had speed from start, was taken back on the turn, but closed ground fast in the final quarter and finished strong HONEY LOCUST was on the inside throughout, held on resolutely and was in tight quarters entering the final eighth.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:24. Off at 6:27. Winner, C. E. Hamilton's ch. g. MACHETE displayed the most speed from the start, swerved under pressure in the stretch, but held on gamely. SPECTACULAR, never far back, raced wide most of the trip and went resolutely in the drive. MIDDLE STATES REGATTA TO QUAKER OARSMEN

13 of 15 Races To Philly Oarsmen

Miller, Single Scull Champion, First in Two Events.

Old Dominion Boats Second Twice, Potomacs Third.

By JACK ESPEY
(Post Staff Correspondent).

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 1.—This bright Labor Day was one of gloom for all save the Philadelphia oarsmen in the thirty-ninth annual Middle States Regatta on historic Potomac River. Out of fifteen events the representatives of several Philadelphia clubs won thirteen, while the other two were divided by the New York A. C. and the Arundel Boat Club of Baltimore.

The host organization, Old Dominion Boat Club, was shut out of first places, as was the Potomac Boat Club, Washington's lone entry.

The Bachelor Barge Club, of Philadelphia, dominated the field by winning five first places and the Undine Barge Club, of the same city, came next with four. Fairmount Rowing Club, of Philadelphia, annexed two first places, while one victory each was registered by Malta Boat Club, Philadelphia; Pennsylvania Barge Club, Philadelphia; New York A. C. and Arundel Boat Club, Baltimore.

Feature to New York Oarsmen.

New York A. C.'s crack eight won the feature race, that for senior eights, at one mile, and came home 6 1-5 seconds ahead of the second place Bachelor Barge Club. The time of the winning crew was 5 minutes 32 2-5 seconds.

From the outset, New York A. C. appeared the victor and its margin was better than a boat length of clear water when it reached the finish. Bachelor Barge drifted across the finish line and was nearly overtaken by the Undine crew. Virginia Boat Club, of Richmond, was fourth, and Arundel fifth.

William Miller, national senior single sculler, won two races, his specialty at one mile, and the quarter-mile dash. In the former, he defeated Joe Geutig, jr., Malta Boat Club, and in the latter outlasted A. E. Fitzpatrick, Penn A. C. Rowing Association, Philadelphia, to win by one-fifth second.

In addition to Miller's victories, Bachelor Berge's sheet showed wins in the junior four-oared gig, intermediate quadruple sculls and senior double sculls.

Undine took the junior sculls, intermediate single sculls, association senior single sculls and intermediate double sculls.

Fairmount Rowing Club's crack junior eight won its race in the junior division and came back to take the intermediate race as a post entry. In the former it was timed in 5:1, but due to lack of rest, was eight seconds slower in the intermediate event.

Two mishaps marked the program. Joseph P. Ryan, New York Athletic Club, was disqualified in the junior single sculls when his blade dipped beneath the shell of Wesley Bevans, Undine, upsetting the latter. The race was rerun and Walter Scheel, Pennsylvania Barge Club, was the victor. Potomac Boat Club registered its lone place in this event with John J. Donovan taking third place.

Rooney-Hamlet Boat In Accident.

The second accident occurred in the junior double sculls when the Virginia Boat Club duo, A. J. Rooney and J. M. Hamlet, drove their boat into one of the markers. They were speedily rescued by an official boat, but did not attempt to finish. The race was won by William Robinhold and Victor C. Brooks, Undine, in 5:52 3-5.

The Malta Boat Club four, after winning the junior event on a decision protested by the New York Athletic Club, attempted to make it a double triumph by entering the intermediate, but in this race was easily beaten by the Bachelor Barge crew, the latter enjoying a lead of six lengths at the finish.

Batchelor Barge also tried to win two races with the same crew and also failed. Its junior four-oared gig winners bowed to the Arundel boatmen in the intermediate class.

Philadelphia's veteran double scullers, Garrett Gilmore and Miller, of Batchelor Barge, national champions, defeated the lightweight champions, Eugene and Tom Clark, of Undine, in the senior double sculls race. The oldtimers had to extend themselves, but held the pace—a thing that was too much for their younger rivals to do.

Singles Sculls Feature To Morrisey.

The association single sculls race went to Tom Morrisey, Undine, and the intermediate single sculls was captured by Charles Keely, also of Undine.

Old Dominion's two places were gained in the junior eight-oared shells and the junior four-oared gig. Both were seconds. The junior eight crew was composed of Milton Routzan, bow; Curtis Backus, Smiley Griesmer, Julian Whitestone, George Gensmer, Ray Heberlig, Robert Duncan, James Trout, stroke, and Lewis Bell, coxswain. The gig was manned by Routzan, Monroe, Duncan, Whitestone and Coxswain Clinton Parker.

Prior to the start of the program the course was dedicated as the George Washington Memorial One-Mile Straightaway. Magnus Bales, chairman of the general regatta committee, dropped a wreath on the waters from an airplane.

QUARTER-MILE DASH, SENIOR SINGLES SCULLS—Won by William G. Miller, Batchelor Barge Club, Philadelphia, 1 minute 7 seconds; second, A. E. Fitzpatrick, Penn A. C. Rowing Association, Philadelphia, 1 minute 7 1-5 seconds; third, Joseph T. Geuting, jr., Malta Boat Club, Philadelphia.

ONE MILE, JUNIOR EIGHT-OARED SHELLS—Won by Fairmount Rowing Club, Philadelphia, 5 minutes 1 second; second, Old Dominion Boat Club, Alexandria, Va., 5 minutes 8 seconds; third, Virginia Boat Club.

ONE MILE, JUNIOR DOUBLE SCULLS—Won by Undine Barge Club, Philadelphia (William Robinhold, bow, and Victor C. Brooks, stroke), 5 minutes 52 3-5 seconds; Virginia Boat Club, spilled, no time taken.

JUNIOR FOUR-OARED GIG—Won by Batchelor Barge Club, Philadelphia (Broun, bow; Mullen, Loeffler, Fallen and T. Quinn, coxswain), 5 minutes 35 seconds; second, Old Dominion Boat Club (Milton Routzan, bow; Tom Monroe, Robert Duncan, Julian Whitestone, and Clinton Parker, coxswain), 5 minutes 54 3-5 seconds.

JUNIOR QUADRUPLE SCULLS — Won by Malta Boat Club (Arthur I. Martindale, bow; Thomas Clyde, Harold Finigan, and James Trout, stroke), 5 minutes 11 seconds; second, New York A. C. (W. R. Sundermeyer, bow; W. A. O'Connor, R. F. Lynip, jr., and J. P. Ryan, stroke), 5 minutes 11 1-5 seconds; third, Arundel Boat Club, no time taken.

INTERMEDIATE SINGLE SCULLS—Won by Charles Keeley, Undine Barge Club, Philadelphia, 6 minutes 18 seconds; second, Harold A. Savage, Malta Boat Club, Philadelphia, 6 minutes 22 seconds; third, E. William Cobourn, Penn A. C.; fourth, J. G. Stovall, Virginia Boat Club. (No times on third and fourth.)

INTERMEDIATE EIGHT-OARED SHELLS—Won by Fairmount Rowing Club, Philadelphia (John McKenna, bow; Cyril Wood, Leo Segal, John Ukleja, Joseph Hecker, Steve McKenna, Ed Cowan, Fred Eddowes, stroke, and George Dietrich, coxswain), 5 minutes 9 seconds; second, Bachelor Barge Club, Philadelphia, 5 minutes 10 seconds.

Forfeit Gives Dayton Win Over Weyer's Cave

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 1.—Dayton retained the bicounty championship for Rockingham County today when Weyer's Cave, Augusta pennant winners, were defeated in the final contest before 2,000 fans on the Bridgewater College Field. Weyer's Cave refused to abide by the action of Umpire Tally in banishing Buford, the Augusta catcher, for disputing a decision on an attempted double play in the ninth.

Weyer's Cave entered the ninth with a 4-to-1 lead, Sutton having limited Dayton to five hits. The Rockinghamers rallied in the ninth to score two runs and had the bases loaded when the flare-up occurred. In spite of the record throng there was no disorder after Umpire-in-chief Miller sustained his colleague's action and forfeited the contest. Each club had won three games of the series.

Orange Co. Boosters Win Double-Header

Special to The Washington Post.

Orange, Va., Sept. 1.—The Orange County Boosters, a team made up of players from all over Orange County, celebrated Labor Day here today by winning both games of a double header, defeating the Orange Ramblers, 6 to 0, and Barboursville, 7 to 3. Byrd Smith, pitcher for the Boosters in the first game, allowed two hits. Only four Rambler batters got on bases.

In the second game, Sanford held the Barboursville players scoreless until the eighth inning. Smith's success over the Ramblers was his seventh successive win.

TENNIS FINAL IS WON BY MITCHELL

Scores Straight Set Victory, But Loses in Doubles.

Special to The Washington Post.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Sept. 1. Dooley Mitchell, Washington, D. C., ace and former runner-up for the national parks championship, today won the men's singles championship of the Morgantown Country Club annual invitation tournament by defeating B. F. Arkle, Wheeling, W. Va., 1929 title holder, in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4 and 7—5.

The match, played before a gallery of 300 persons, was featured by brilliant driving and accurate placement shots. Mitchell, with stronger pace to his strokes, upset Arkle's placement game sufficiently to take each set by a close margin.

Arkle and his doubles partner, William Abrams, of Wheeling, took revenge a short time later when they captured the doubles title from Mitchell and Maj. J. H. Hills, Washington, D. C., and member of the Army's Leech Cup Team in straight sets, 6—3 and 6—0.

Match Shortened by Agreement.

By agreement of the players, the match was shortened to three sets instead of the regulation five to permit completion of the tournament today. Arkle's brilliant cross-court volleys and Abrams' terrific overhead game was responsible for the doubles' win.

Miss Miriam Sullivan, Pittsburgh, captured the women's singles event by defeating Miss Mary Ebeling, of Wheeling, in straight sets, 6—1, 6—4.

In the semifinals matches played this morning, Arkle eliminated William Mooney, Uniontown, Lafayette College star, from the men's singles, 6—2 and 8—6. Mitchell put out Eddie Yeomans, Washington, D. C., 7—5, 6—1.

In the semifinals of doubles, Arkle and Abrams won from Yeomans and Colin Stam, of Washington, D. C., 6—4, 4—6, 6—3. The Wheeling pair fought an uphill battle in each of the two sets they won. Mitchell and Hills defeated Wilhelm Weber and S. Miller, Clarksburg, 6—1 and 6—1.

33 Grid Candidates At First V. P. I. Drill

Special to The Washington Post.

Blacksburg, Va., Sept. 1.—Thirty-three candidates for the V. P. I. Eleven reported for the first drill beneath a broiling sun here this morning and eleven more were expected to be on hand in time for the morning session tomorrow. Among the missing were Jim Swart and Mark Ritter, tall, rangy tackles, and Red Jones, veteran guard from whom no definite word has come.

Orville Neal and Lyal Clark, new coaches, put on the first blackboard demonstration of new plays this afternoon and intimated that lectures and diagrams will precede actual use of new methods of attack on the practice field. Limbering up tactics are to be stressed for several days, but plans of the coaches call for plenty of rough work before the end of the week.

From the opening whistle this morning Coaches Neal and Clark commenced work on an adequate pass defense—something many past Gobbler elevens have lacked. The backs already are busy learning new plays and ground-gaining stunts new to V. P. I. teams. The squad today included thirteen backs and twenty linemen, nearly all in good physical condition after healthful summer activities.

STEWARDS REAPPOINTED.

Martin Nathanson, Chicago, and George Brown, jr., Baltimore, have been reappointed to serve as stewards at the 1931 racing meet of the Louisiana Jockey Club, which starts Thursday, January 1, and continues for 41 days up to and including Mardi Gras Day, Tuesday, February 17.

G. U. STARTS FOR GRID CAMP

First Drill at Point Lookout Listed Tomorrow.

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY'S football forces today will move on Point Lookout, Md., where they will establish a training camp to be maintained three weeks in preparing for the 1930 season. Headed by Tommy Mills, the Hilltoppers will depart by buses at 1 p. m. and expect to reach the Southern Maryland resort in time for supper.

The first workout will be held tomorrow morning, but little more than light exercise is slated in this session. The practice will grow intensive day by day until within a week the squad will be ready for scrimmaging.

Two Daily Drills Starting Thursday.

Starting Thursday, two drills will be the daily program. The first will open at 9:30 in the morning and last for two hours. The second will be from 3 to 5:30 in the afternoon.

Head Coach Mills last night was expecting only two of his assistants to join him the first couple of days in camp. They are Johnny Colrick, end and back field coach, and Tom Murphy, line coach. Tim Moynihan, the third assistant, is en route from Rawlings, Wyo., and should reach the camp about Thursday.

Bethesda Pin League Will Meet Tomorrow

Hugh Irey, president of the Bethesda Bowling League, has called a meeting of the managers of the teams of the league at the Bethesda bowling alleys tomorrow at 8 p. m. A schedule will be drawn up and final plans for season made.

The league in its third season is officered by Hugh Irey, president; Ray Huffman, vice president; George Boss, secretary-scorer, and J. H. Hiser, treasurer.

Bethesda Bowlers Meet Baltimore Team Again

Henry Hiser's Bethesda bowlers, national champions, will defend their laurels against Baltimore's best. Plans have been completed for a home and home match with George Lang Recreation Center Five, champions of Baltimore. The first block of five games will be rolled in Baltimore on Saturday, September 13, at 8 p. m. The second block will be rolled at Bethesda on the following Saturday. Total pins will decide the winner.

These two teams met last year under a similar arrangement. The Baltimoreans piled up a gigantic lead on their alleys and, although defeated by 171 sticks on the Bethesda alleys, still staggered in a few sticks ahead. The Bethesdans are confident of reversing the count this time.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

ALL of the local golf courses yesterday were crowded with players and owing to their dry and fast condition the scores were almost uniformly low. The Argyle Club proved an exception to the general rule, inasmuch as no program for Labor Day was scheduled, but at al the other clubs there was competition in varied events.

At the Bannockburn Club the flag tournament was won by W. C. Wiley, who with a gross 97 planted his flag in the cup on the eighteenth green. Frank J. Pickett was runner-up and T. P. Hayden won third prize. The blindfold driving contest was won by J. A. McKeever, with a distance of 200 yards, with Norman J. Hall second with 190 yards. The approaching and putting contest, the last stroke being played through a barrel, was won by G. Emerson Moore in three strokes, W. C. Corey finishing as runner-up with four strokes.

Competition for the preisdent's cup was the principal event at the Beaver Dam Club and resulted in a victory for N. T. Patterson, with a card of 82—16—64. There was a quadruple tie for second place, as follows: J. L. Townsend, 85—15—70; Forrest Thompson, 79—9—70; E. B. Strong, 94—24—70, and Channing Davis, 93—23—70.

The mens' driving contest was won by Forrest Thompson with a distance of 270 yards, William T. Henderson following with 260 yards and Leroy F. Day finishing third with 250 yards. M. F. McCarthy won the mens' approaching contest when he laid his ball with six feet of the cup from a distance of 170 yards, William T. Henderson winning the runner-up prize, eight feet from the pin, while James Allen was ten feet away. William T. Henderson also won the putting contest when he holed out in 1 from a distance of 60 feet, H. A. Neff taking second prize with a 2.

Stone won the putting contest. Mrs. Swartz won the approaching contest, laying her ball within six feet of the pin from a distance of 50 yards.

Dr. Wood Wins Feature At Chevy Chase.

At the Chevy Chase Club the members competed for the secretary's cup, 18 holes, match play against par. The winner was Dr. E. L. Wood, with a gross score of 75 and a handicap of 14, 4 up on par. Admiral M. M. Taylor finished 3 up on par and W. G. Brantley, jr., and Henry Ravenel were each 2 up on par. The low gross score was captured by Charles Makall with 72 but the most remarkable card of the day was turned in by Mrs. Harrison Brand, jr., a comparatively new player, who negotiated the eighteen holes in 40—39—79, notwithstanding one 7 and three 6s, follows:

Out	4	7	4	3	4	6	5	4	3	—40

Considine May Represent District in National Singles

BOB CONSIDINE, lanky District of Columbia and Washington singles champion, may be included in the draw of the national singles championship, which commences Saturday at Forest Hills, N. Y., if the efforts of the Washington Tennis Association bear fruit.

Winfree Johnson, president of the local association, has wired the United States Lawn Tennis Association requesting that they permit Considine to enter the tournament, despite the fact that entries closed on August 25.

Robert E. Newby called at the offices of the national tennis body yesterday in New York to explain that Considine's entry had been inadvertently not forwarded to the committee in charge of the tournament, but that he had been for some time the choice of the local association as the District's representative.

If Considine's entry is accepted he will swell to two the ranks of local netmen who will be seen at Forest Hills this week-end. Clarence Charest, veteran champion of the United States after a light workout yesterday, announcement that he would defend his title won last year when he defeated J. B. Adoue, jr., of Texas, in the finals, 4—6, 6—2, 6—1.

Charest has been confined to his home during the past week because of an attack of grip, but believes he is rounding into the shape necessary for the Forest Hills test.

Veteran Golfer Makes Ace at East Potomac

As if he had been aiming for it, Jerome C. Shear, 60-year-old golfer, yesterday made a hole-in-one on the second hole of Course F, of the East Potomac Golf Course, a distance of 180 yards. Shear's ace, his first negotiated in four years of play, was made with a midiron. There was nothing flukey about the shot, the ball sailing from the tee straight to the flag and into the hole.

Shear was accompanied by S. B. Cooksey, W. D. Patterson and R. Paul McElrath.

SAM WEST INJURES ARM, LOST TO NATS FOR WEEK

Centerfielder Must Rest Elbow

Myer May Be Back in Line-Up Starting Tomorrow.

Kuhel Sent to Home; Loudspeakers Hit at Ball Park.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

NEWS that Fred Marberry was ready to return to the races did not work out so well for the Nationals, for three others immediately took his place on the hospital squad. Buddie Myer pulled up with a sore hand just before Saturday's game and has been unable to play since, while Outfielder Sammy West and First Baseman Joe Kuhel reported themselves as casuals yesterday.

Kuhel has been out for some time and, with Joe Judge and Art Shires available, he will not be badly missed but West's absence at this time is considered as a calamity, for the little flychaser not only has been fielding as only he can, but he also has been hitting hard and timely. He showed up yesterday with his throwing arm in a sling, an examination by the club physician disclosing water on the elbow.

West suffered from the same ailment while at Chattanooga last spring and was inactive for about a week and possibly may be kept out for this length of time because of his present injury, received early in Saturday's game. The club physician declares, however, that "Sam from Birmingham" may be back earlier from his present ailment. Time alone will tell.

Kuhel Has Chipped Bone.

An X-ray photograph was taken of Kuhel's right knee yesterday, following several complaints from him that it throbbed at times like an aching tooth, and the picture showed a chipped bone just to the side of his kneecap. As rest is prescribed as the only cure, the youngster will leave tonight for Kansas City to visit his fiance in Kansas City and will rejoin the team in St. Louis next Monday. Kuhel, by the way, plans to become a benedict this fall.

Myer's injury is not serious, but it prevents him from properly gripping his bat. He is expected to be ready to get in the series with the Yankees, which starts in New York tomorrow.

Hitting a fellow while he is down is considered the proper thing in baseball, and the Nationals, who have beaten the Yankees fifteen tims in their eighteen meetings this season, hope to administer four more lickings in the series, which opens in the Big Town tomorrow, today being an open one for the Johnsons.

Jones Faces Yanks Tomorrow.

"Sad Sam" Jones will draw the opening game pitching assignment. The Yanks have beaten him but once in the last three seasons and have bowed to him three times this year, although he probably would have gotten his bumps Saturday here had Johnson not removed him.

The loud speakers were working as per schedule in Griffith Stadium yesterday and seemed to make a hit with the fans, especially with the early comers who were treated to a musical program before play started.

GAR WOOD RETAINS SPEED BOAT TITLE

heat of this race after Miss Britain I had taken the first heat by default.

In the second heat the lead seesawed, The Phantom frequently beating the British craft to the stakes, only to lose it as Scott-Paine took the turns on the inside. The Phantom seemed to have the advantage on the straightaways, however, and finished three lengths ahead. The third heat, although a perfunctory affair, also was a battle between Miss Britain I and The Phantóm, the latter winning by a nose. In the point summary, Miss Britain I had a total of 1,122 by reason of a first place in the opening heat and two seconds, while Phantom accumulated only 800. Baby Minchas, of Bay City, Mich., was third.

Start Fails to Bring Thrill.

The start of today's Harmsworth Trophy lacked some of the thrill of Saturday's start. Hawker did not try to beat Wood across the starting line, but endeavored to keep only abreast of him. They went across almost simultaneously, with Miss America VIII about 50 yards behind and Miss America V in the wash of its sister ship. Hawker was able to keep up with Gar Wood only a short distance, however, for both Miss America IX and Miss America VIII shot out ahead on the back stretch and Estelle IV never again threatened. The British challenger was nearly a mile behind at the end of the first lap, and before the breaking down of her fuel tanks in the fifth lap was nearly 3 miles behind.

It then became a race between Miss America IX and Miss America VIII. At the end of the fourth lap the former boat was leading the older Miss America by one-eighth of a mile. Finishing the fifth time around, George Wood crossed the line first, but the lead was short-lived. Gar Wood opening up Miss America IX and winning easily.

EASTON WINS IN NINTH.

Easton, Md., Sept. 1.—Easton defeated Cambridge today at Federal Park before a large crowd, 5 to 4. Both Hummer and Mace pitched fine ball and were given good support. With the score tied when Easton came to bat in the ninth inning, Hummer hit for two bases, stole third and scored on a two-base drive to center field by Cohen.

SAVES GAME

JOE CRONIN, who yesterday turned in one of the best catches ever witnessed here.

NATS BEAT RED SOX TWICE, 2-1 AND 6-3

the score was tied when Reeves lined toward short. Cronin, however, picked out this time to turn in the best catch he has ever made and the day was saved.

There was many a thrill in the second game, too, and it looked as though the Nats were in for a trimming until the "lucky" frame rolled around. In the first six innings Marberry allowed but five hits, but these were bunched in two frames, each cluster netting runs. Oliver opened the game with a triple and Scarritt, next up, singled him home to give the Sox the lead, with the Nats tying the string in their second.

With two down, Harris opened with a single and Ruel came through with a one-baser on the hit-and-run. Harris was ready to pull up at third when he saw that Oliver had fumbled the ball and he then hustled home to make it 1-all

Boston Makes Another Attack.

In the fifth, the Beaneaters got to Marberry again, clustering three hits which netted two runs. These bingles came after two were out. Oliver doubling, Scarritt singling and stealing, and Regan then poking a one-shot to left. When Marberry walked Warstler, first up in the seventh, and Heving singled the rabbit shortstop to third. Brown came on the scene and immediately proceeded to hog up all of the limelight.

He held Durham to a roller to him, granted Oliver a tap to Cronin on which Warstler was nipped at home, and then forced Scarritt to pop to Cronin.

Then in the home half Brownie showed a punch at the bat which no one has suspected was there. With one dead, Harris tripled and Ruel singled him home. Hayes popped to Reeves for the second out. After debating with himself whether to use a pinch-hitter for the pitcher, Manager Johnson let Brown hit—and he did, poling out his homer to deep center to give the Nats a 4-3 lead, which they increased by two runs in the eighth on successive doubles by Manush and Cronin, a helpful out, and the Nat shortstop's theft of home.

24th Win for Ferrell As Indians Take Pair

St. Louis, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The Cleveland Indians celebrated Labor Day here today by winning a doubleheader from the St. Louis Browns, the first game 13 to 8, and the nightcap 9 to 5. The second game was called at the end of the eighth inning because of darkness.

In winning the second game, Wesley Ferrell, of the Indians, chalked up his twenty-fourth victory of the season and his thirteenth triumph in a row. Willis Hudlin, the Indians' third pitcher, was the winning hurler in the first encounter.

TIGERS DOWN WHITE SOX, 6-5 AND 4-2

Whitehill Wins 15th; Opener Decided in 9th Inning.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The Detroit Tigers took the holiday double-header from the White Sox here today, winning both games by scores of 6 to 5 and 4 to 2. Earl Whitehill got his fifteenth win of the year in the second contest after Ted Lyons had failed in an effort to win his twentieth.

The winning runs in the first game came over in the ninth when Funk doubled, went to third on an infield out and scored on a single by McManus. The second game went to the Tigers when hits by McManus and Akers, coupled with two errors by Watwood, let in a pair in the fourth, and hits by Gehringer, Stone and Akers scored two more in the sixth. Alexander and Reynolds hit home runs in the opening contest.

LOTT-DOEG BEATEN AS EAST BEATS WEST

puzzle to the Santa Monica giant today.

Lott, in a languid light-hearted mood, was no match for the towering Shields, who was serving and driving at a pace that stamped him a real threat in the national championship tournament beginning Saturday.

The Western representatives were still fairly confident of victory at this point, however, as Lott and Doeg were counted upon to even the score by downing Mangin and Van Ryn in the first of the doubles encountered.

Although weak in the center court, where Van Ryn and Mangin often scored with well-aimed placement shots, Lott and Doeg seemed safely in the saddle in the third set when they led at 3—0 and even when their advantage had been cut to 5-3 by the fighting New Jersey pair.

Macks and Yanks Divide As Ruffing Allows 2 Hits

after two men were out. These came in the first and the fifth. Dykes walked in the second, also after two men had been retired. Only one Mackman reached first after the fifth inning—Earnshaw, when Ruth dropped his line fly in the eighth. In addition to his other feats, Ruffing struck out Simmons three times in a row.

The monster crowd had a very convincing example of the reason the A.'s are up this year and the Yanks are down in the bruising first game. The champions, because of the pitching of Pipgras, had really only two chances to score and they improved on both. The Yanks should have put the decision beyond the reach of the Mackmen in the very first inning, but failed and then fell ingloriously before Grove when the pinch came in the eighth and ninth.

Army Sergeant Wins "Navy" Rifle Match

Camp Perry, Ohio, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The Navy match of the national rifle matches here was won today by an Army sergeant, Frederick Pauch, of Somerville, N. J., who topped 1,484 shooters with a score of 97 out of a possible 100 points.

Robert B. Moore, Joplin, Mo., civilian, and Sergt. John Carlson, Fort George Wright, Wash., also had the largest number of shots in the inner ring of the bull's-eye.

Three service men tied for second at 96 points each, Sergt. Willard Brown, United States Marine Corps; Lieut. Kamiel Martens, Fort George Wright, and Robert F. Gadd, Connecticutt National Guard.

Maj. C. H. Hodges, Fort Benning, Ga., carried off the day's honors at skeet shooting, a modified form of trapshooting, with 24 out of 25 targets.

Thurman Randle, Fort Worth, Tex., is leading the shooters attempting to qualify for the twenty places on the United States team which next Sunday will fire in the annual Dewar international shoot against marksmen of Canada, England, France and Belgium. Randle's score was 795 out of a possible 800.

IN THE WAKE OF THE GAME

ing power, which is plenty, to get the ball to first in time for the putout.

Warstler made a nice back-handed stop of Harris' single in the fourth. It prevented Judge from scoring at the time.

Lisenbee fanned Cronin opening the home fourth and then walked Judge, this stroll later being turned into a run.

Hayes made a brilliant catch in the fifth to start a double-play when he raced over toward first to snare Warstler's liner with his gloved hand as the ball was sailing away from him.

Manush dropped a perfect bunt toward third base in the fifth, but only beat it out by a whisker due to the great att[illegible] which Reeves made to get him. Had the ball not skidded just as the Sox infielder was set to get it, Heinie probably would have been caught.

Rothrock batted for Warstler with two dead and Reeves on third in the Sox' seventh and Crowder fanned him.

Webb rushed over toward the foul line in the eighth to grab Manush's liner only a few feet from the ground for a really brilliant catch.

Manush did not have a chance afield until he camped under Scarritt's fly opening the ninth.

SECOND GAME.

Marberry, who had not pitched in nearly a month, was given a great ovation when he toed the slab He was particularly welcomed by Tommy Oliver, Boston lead-off man, who tripled to left on the second ball pitched.

Reeves went over back of third to make a brilliant stop and peg of Cronin's near-hit in the second.

Harris was credited with the first home hit, singling to left with two gone in round 2. Ruel then followed with a perfect hit-and-run hrough the territory vacated by Warstler.

"Sonny Boy" Hayes went over behind Judge to turn in a fine stop of Scarritt's bad hopper opening the third canto.

Manush had a chance to be a hero in the third inning after Rice and Bluege had singled with one out, but he rolled into a double play.

Cronin tried to get out of the way of one of Durnham's shoots opening the native fourth, but the ball hit his bat and rolled fair to Todt.

Scarritt's theft in the fifth should be charged to Marberry rather than Catcher Ruel. The pitcher took a short wind-up and then threw a half-speed ball, the runner being almost to second when the sphere crossed the plate. This theft gave the aliens another run, as things turned out, putting Scarritt in a position to register on Regan's single which followed.

Dave Harris did not have a chance in the first game and his first in the second did not come until the start of the sixth, when he gobbled up Webb's fly.

Lloyd Brown was kept quite busy yesterday. He warmed up in the bullpen at intervals in the first game and was busy twice before finally called in to relieve Marberry in the seventh of the nightcap.

With the hit-and-run on and Hayes up in the seventh, Ruel dashed for second. Hayes missed the ball, but Ruel was credited with a steal when Heving heaved poorly.

Hayes contributed a great play starting the eighth, tearing over toward first to take Regan's grounder with his gloved hand after it appeared as though the ball had passed him.

Manager Wagner called on both Sweeney and Berry as pinch-hitters in the ninth, but they were no harder for Brown than had been the regulars.

GAMECOCKS COLORFUL.

Billy Laval, South Carolina football coach whose crazy quilt formation has startled opponents, offers a cute color scheme this fall. It will be, says Billy, scarlet trimmed with turquoise.

19 LETTERMEN AT FLORIDA.

Gainesville, Fla., Aug. 23 (A.P.).—Florida is expecting another formidable football team this fall, with 19 lettermen in the fold, including seven backs. The 'Gators will play seven Southern Conference squads besides Chicago.

Six-Bout Boxing Program At Ft. Washington Sept. 8

WHAT seems to be another attractive card has been arranged by Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn for the fight show to be presented next Monday night at Fort Washington, Md., under auspices of the Front Line Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Two eight rounders will feature the program of six bouts.

"Baker Boy" Schwartz, of Alexandria, will clash with Red Barry, of the Mohawk Club, ni the main bout of eight rounds. Both are middleweights. Eddie Buell, Mohawk Club, and Frankie De Angelo, of the Frankie Mann stable, will meet in the other eight rounder. They are featherweights.

Supporting these two fights, Ahearn has matched Billy Tucker, his own protege, and Johnny Burke, of Walter Reed Hospital. Two weeks ago this pair staged a rousing slugging match. This bout is slated for six rounds.

In another affair of six rounds Billy Strickler will tackle Jack Turner, veteran middleweight, who is making a comeback. Ahearn will arrange two other bouts of four rounds each.

According to Ahearn, the City of Washington steamer has been chartered to transport the fans to Fort Washington. The boat has a capacity of 2,500 persons. Round trip tickets will be sold for 50 cents each, the matchmaker said.

CARDS WIN 2 TO GAIN 4TH PLACE

Slug Way to Double Triumph by 11-6 and 5-1 Scores.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 1 (A.P.)—The St. Louis Cards went on a hitting spree here today, beating Pittsburgh in both games of a holiday double bill, to assume third place in the National League. The score in the morning was 11 to 6, and in the afternoon 5 to 1.

Rhem was victor in the morning, when the Red Birds compiled seventeen safeties off Swetonic and French. Grimes had an easy time in the afternoon holding the Buccaneers to one run. In the meantime his mates were hitting Kremer and Spencer for a grand total of eighteen.

Kremer was out to win his twentieth game, but he could not hold the Cards in check.

Robins Tumble to 4th, Splitting With Braves

Boston, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The fast slipping Brooklyn Robins tumbled into fourth place in the National League standings today, breaking even in a doubleheader with the Boston Braves while the Cards were taking two from Pittsburgh. Boston accounted for the first battle, 5 to 3, after rain had delayed the start, but the Robins took a 4-to-2 decision in the second game.

Wally Berger's thirty-second home run off Ray Phelps drove in three of the Braves' five runs in the first game while Lopez's homer off Sherdel accounted for all of the Robins' tallies.

Hollis Thurston opposed Bob Smith in the nightcap and won his own game when he doubled in the seventh, scoring two base runners.

Giants, Despite Heavy Hitting, Split With Phils

Philadelphia, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—The Giants did plenty of slugging today, but the best they could get was an even break with the Phillies, New York taking the opener, 8 to 4 and Philadelphia the second, 4 to 3.

Carl Hubbell held the Phillies to seven hits in the first game, while his teammates were banging away at three Phillies' hurlers for fourteen safeties, including homers by Fred Leach and Frank Hogan and a triple, double and two singles by Bill Terry.

In the second encounter the Giants hung up thirteen hits, but could not bunch them, while the wildness of Bill Yalker let the Phillies get away to a nearly 4-to-1 lead. The McGraw men sent Ray Benge to the showers in the ninth, but Collins stopped the rally by disposing of O'Farrell for the third out.

very badly they wouldn't give it up for prize fight tickets. So the victims generally have only themselves to blame and no serious hurt for redresse. If the sport pages excite them and lure them to the fights, the sport pages also warn them that the best they can expect is the worst of it. So, the only honest reason for rescinding the prize fight laws lies in the rather scandalous fact that the various state governments, by participating in the profits, by making the matches, by waiving the rules passed for the protection of the public, become parties to a notorious abuse.

The State of Pennsylvania, for instance, could be in better business than the supervision of such a job as the Carnera-Godfrey job in Philadelphia the other night, knowing the character of those concerned before the match was sanctioned. The customers saw a diverting show and the fact that the fight was a wake, if it was a fake, detracted nothing from the spectacle but rather enlivened it. Dishonesty always is more interesting than honesty, as the criminal news of the daily papers will show, but when a State becomes an accessory it loses dignity and for that reason all prize fight commissions should be abolished, leaving the racket to express itself in its own way on its own responsibility.

Miss Mysterious—By Larry Lawrence

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A sorority girl, affectionately known at the university as Babe, has always believed that her parents died when she was very young and that her name is Thelma Townley. She has always received large checks from a man named Clement Forseith, whom she believed to be her guardian. She is given a tremendous emotional shock by a newspaper story telling of him committing suicide at Portland, Oreg. A few days after seeing the story she receives a letter from him telling her that she is not Thelma Townley and predicting that she will never learn her true identity. The letter also says that she is now a pauper as he has lost all her money in the stock market and for this reason is going to take his own life. After confiding this to Violet Rimmel, a close friend, she learns that a young man from the West Coast is seeking her. He appears at the sorority house under the name of Reuben Morgan. He startles her by saying that he knows of her loss and bluntly asks her to marry him as a way out of her difficulties. She determines to learn all that he knows of her life. A telegram arrives while they are talking. It warns her against Morgan.

CHAPTER III.

Stuffing the telegram into her bosom, Babe returned to the living room. "I must not let him see that I have been warned," she thought as she took a seat near Morgan. Just then Violet came down the stairs and into the room. It was a relief to Babe, who was trying to hide her agitation, to have the introduction as a blind.

"Miss Rimmel, this is Mr. Morgan." The young man arose and bowed, saying, "I am happy to meet a sister of Miss Townley."

"I hope I didn't intrude," Violet remarked, looking at Bebe to get her cue. "Not at all," Babe answered and went on, "I have told Mr. Morgan that I have an appointment this evening. He understands."

"Yes, indeed, and I won't detain you any longer, but may I see you tomorrow morning?" Morgan asked. "Please say that you will see me in the morning."

"Why, yes, I will," Babe said. "I'll cut classes tomorrow. You may come at 11 o'clock. The house mother will be here, but we can talk."

"Until 11 o'clock then," he said, putting on his coat. As soon as Morgan had departed Babe withdrew the telegram and handed it to Violet.

"Well, I'll be—— I'll be flunked in math," she said. "That big boy has plenty of looks, but they're not all good. Who is he? And who sent this wire?"

"I haven't the least idea about either question. I don't know a soul in Tacoma. I hate anonymous messages. Still I can't help but fear that man. I was warned by my intuition before I got that wire. I wonder, Violet, if feminine intuition is as good as it's rated." She paused a moment, then blurted out, "He asked me to marry him."

"What? Did he have the unqualified brass to do that? And you don't even know him!"

"Vi, he's the fastest worker I've ever seen in my life. And he does know something about me. He says that Forseith always was a crook. I wonder what his game is. Can he be sincere?"

Determined to Conquer.

"Well, you've got to hurry now, honey," Violet said. "I'll go to your room while you dress for the party and we can talk it out. See what you can make out of it all. Then we'll try and forget it and have a good time tonight."

"I believe I can have a good time," Babe said. "Now that I am getting a little used to the facts, I can stand them better, and, Vi, I am through with gloom and crying. I am going to whip this unknown world and learn who and what I am if I have to turn burglar or—or bootlegger." The girls tittered a little at this remark, but Violet realized that Babe was hardening herself to her task.

Morgan walked away from the house, his face screwed up in deep thought, now and then relieved with a half smile.

"That's the kid, all right," he said to himself. "A swell dish, too, if you ask me. It wouldn't be so hard to take at that. Those eyes! Durned if I don't believe I'm falling for the minx. But I'll not let sentiment get any sand in my gears. Not this bird. She's not going to be any pushover. She's pretty clear in the skull. I'll have to watch my step. Still, the skirts always were easy for me.

"Marry her? Why not? It would be the easiest way to put it over, and then I could live in clover up to my neck the rest of my life. That's the ticket. I'll cross this Forseith plenty."

Arriving at his hotel, Morgan asked the bellhop where he could get a snort, and the obliging boy said, "I can get a pint for you."

"That's the stuff, boy," Morgan said and went to his room. "I can tip over a couple here without being seen," he thought as the boy came in with the liquor. "This tank town is too close to Chicago for comfort. That blond down in Chi had dicks looking for me two years. Some of these John Laws may remember my map."

In Babe's room the girls talked and talked, but they reached no conclusions. Babe would say, "I feel sure he is up to something, but what can it be? Why did he propose marriage?"

"Maybe it really was love at first sight," Violet suggested. "Stranger things have happened than a man falling in love with you at first sight, old dear. Pete is in love with you, and I'll swear he has been since the first day he laid eyes on you."

To the Dance With Pete.

"Oh, Pete is different. He's a darned nice boy, handy to have around and all that, but he's just a friend."

"Well, I didn't tell you, but it's Pete you're going with tonight. He begged me to get you to go to the dance. And he seemed awful serious, for some reason or other."

The sound of an automobile horn broke up the talk. "That's Pete now," Violet said as she took one more dab with her powder puff. "Come on, Babe."

The girls raced down and were out on the porch just as Pete came up the steps.

"Well, Babe, old dear, you look like a million," he said. "I am certainly glad to see you. Doggone it, you must have been dodging me for a week. I have been hanging around after psychology every day thinking you would come down the hall."

"Don't be silly, Pete," Babe said, but she was not offended, he knew, and the girls went with him to his car where Bruce, Violet's friend, was waiting, being very unconcerned and collegiate.

It was only a short drive to the fraternity house. The rugs were up and the radio was tuned in on dance music. Several couples were dancing. Violet and her escort moved out on the floor but Pete took Babe by the arm and led her to an alcove.

"Listen fast, Babe," he said. "I didn't call you myself because I've had a scare and didn't want to call you for fear I'd spill it on the phone. That's why I worked on Violet to get you to come here tonight." Babe started to protest that it made no difference but Pete was so intent on what he was saying that she just sat and listened.

"Now don't get excited—something mighty funny has happened. You're being trailed. Two men have been near you all day. Two men who look like they would cut a throat as quick as they would swallow a marshmallow. I've been dogging your footsteps myself for a few days, because I saw you looking so pale and worried. I couldn't get up the courage to talk to you. That's how I happened to see this pair. They're slick, too, but I heard them talking.

"One said, 'That's the girl. All we got to do is to nab her and get going. It looks easy.'"

"Now, Pete, you are being theatrical. You're a big boy. Why try and play foolish games on me? Who on earth would be trailing me?"

Pete Fears Kidnappers.

"Say, honey, I don't know. But I'm all worked up. I tell you, these men are planning to kidnap you. I don't blame them for that matter. I'd like to kidnap you myself, but these men are thugs. I'm sure of it. Do you know any reason why they might want to get you out of the way? Are they after ransom money?"

"Pete, you must be mistaken," Babe answered lamely, but she felt, somehow, that what he was saying was true. Mystery was piling up too thick about her. But instead of terrifying her it seemed to make her more calm.

"Now, Babe, honey," . . . It was the second time he had used that word and Babe had not called him down for it. His heart gave a little leap. Maybe, after all, Babe wasn't so very displeased with him.

"Please, Babe, promise me that you'll be very careful, that you won't budge out of the house, unless you are with me, or several girls. I started to call the police, but gee, I hated to do that without your permission, and maybe, after all, I am wrong."

"Pete, I'm no baby, just because they call me Babe. I can take care of myself. And for heaven's stake don't call the police. You know what the papers would do. 'Sorority House Under Guard,' or something like that in a headline. I don't believe there is a thing to worry about."

The music was going. A dozen couples were dancing and Babe and Pete were as much alone as if they had been on a desert island. "Well, all right, I won't call the police." Then, obviously trying to change the subject, he said: "Tell me, Babe, when you're going to thaw out a little for me. You act like you can just about tolerate me and that's all. You know I'm simply batty about you. And I will be through school this semester."

"What are you going to do, Pete?" Babe asked.

"The old man has promised me a trip around the world, when I graduate. How's that?"

"I think it is simply scrumptious," Babe answered. "But I mean what work are you going to do? Just because you were a football star is no sign that you're going to be a star in the business or professional world. I hope you don't do like Red Grange and end up playing professional football, or don't go on living off your father's wealth. I don't know why I have suddenly become so interested in folks making good earning their own way and all that, but I have."

Plans for the Future.

She didn't know why she had taken the sudden interest. The very business of making her way now was always working in her subconscious mind and naturally enough she thought of others in somewhat the same light.

"Babe, you sound interested in me. It tickles me to death. And I'll tell you what I'm going to do. I'm going in with dad in the real estate business. Just plain old every day dirt and houses and business buildings. He wants me, too, and I want to please him. It is not very thrilling as a prospect, but it's a good business. I didn't take any professional stuff here. 'Henry Jones & Son, Real Estate and Insurance.' That doesn't sound bad, does it?"

"No, certainly not. The son being you, Pete, I suppose?"

"None other. Peter Jones, in person, not a talkie. Pete Jones, dirt peddler de luxe. But, Babe, all kidding to one side, as old Ring Lardner insists on saying, how would you like to take that trip around the world with me? I'm just certain that dad would get a big kick out of paying for two tickets."

"Say, Pete, are you proposing to me?"

"Sure I am. And here's a little five-armed badge to prove it and seal it. I'll follow up with a diamond so fast you won't know what happened, if you'll say the word."

"Well, Peter Jones, you tempt me," Babe said. "You certainly do tempt me. It would be a nice way out of difficulties—well, it would take care of some of them, anyway. But, Pete, I can't marry you, and I can't tell you why. Not now, at any rate."

"Aw, honey, I don't see why not."

"I won't tell you why not, either. Except one thing—I'm not horribly in love with you."

"Say, I'll make you love me. Babe, I'll—I'll—well, I'd lay down my life for you if you needed it. And what's that difficulty you talk about?"

"Never mind. Let's talk about something else. Let's dance."

"I'll dance, but I'd rather talk to you. I want to marry you."

Another Offer of Love.

Babe looked at him long and intently. "Pete, I like you a lot," she said. "More than I ever suspected. But I am going to say 'no' right now and stick to it. Some day I may tell you why." She was tempted then and there to tell him of her other proposal that day and to tell him of the thing that was tearing at her heart. The uncertainty of her parentage. Her dismal ignorance of who she was and of what was going to happen to her. But she decided to say no more and therefore insisted on dancing.

The evening passed quickly. At 11 p. m. Pete took her home. Violet went with Bruce in another car. Pete didn't even try to kiss her goodnight as he had tried several times before. But he held her hand a little longer than she usually permitted. And there was a look akin to worship in his eyes as he said, "Good-night, Babe. And remember, you are going to be careful about dashing out of the house and all that sort of thing."

Babe had almost forgotten the threat of the men he had said were laying in wait, as they do in old-fashioned dime thrillers. It seemed so foolish. But as she went up to her room it began to seem more real. More possible. She did not undress immediately. Her mind was never more active. The events of the day passed in review. The mystery of it all revolved and revolved.

Suddenly she felt stifled, felt held in a prison of ignorance and doubt. She was a little dizzy.

"I'll slip out the back way and walk to the campus," she said half aloud. Babe had done this many times before. She told herself that she was a little fool to believe in kidnaping stories. She would show herself she wasn't afraid. The night air would clear her head. As she tiptoed out the back way a shadow crossed her path.

"Just a shadow. Am I an infant to be afraid of shadows?" she asked, and walked rapidly into the yard.

A hand was clapped over her mouth. Another gripped her arm as in a vise.

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

ARLINGTON POLICE BUSY OVER HOLIDAY

24 Are Held on Various Charges in County With Hearings Set Today.

CORNERSTONE IS LAID

ARLINGTON COUNTY, BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

While a large portion of the population of the county were away enjoying the holiday week-end season, Arlington County police, under the leadership of Sheriff Howard B. Fields, have worked overtime since Sunday making a total of 24 arrests up to an early hour last night. The arrests over the week-end exceeded the capacity of the county jail.

The major arrest was made yesterday afternoon when a call was received at the jail that a colored man had assaulted a white woman in the vicinity of the military road within a short distance of the couthouse.

Officer William H. Thompson, responding to the call, arrested James Brown, colored, giving his age as 40, living in Arlington County. According to the woman, whose name is being withheld, she went to the gasoline station where the man worked and upon her entering he is alleged to have grabbed her by the throat and attempted to kick her.

Among other arrests made were the following: Shirley Fortune, of Washington, charged with drving an automobile while under the influence of liquor; John W. Tompkins, of Washington, held on a similar charge, and Leonard Jackson, charged with driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Those held on charges of transporting are: Clifton Martin, Alvin Thomas, Clevester McLaughlin, James Brown and Hugh Williams.

Among the officers who lead the crusade with Sheriff Fields were: William H. Thompson, James D. East, Raymond Crack, Jack Conway, Hugh Jones and Edward Duncan.

All alleged offenders will be given a hearing before Police Judge Harry R. Thomas today at 9:30 o'clock.

With uncovered heads more than 200 colored persons stood in the sweltering heat yesterday and witnessed the laying of the corner stone of the new $20,000 Mount Zion Baptist Colored Church on Mount Vernon avenue.

The ceremonies were conducted by the Colored Odd Fellows Stevens Lodge of Arlington County, No. 1435.

Preceding the laying of the stone a parade was staged headed by the Colored Odd Fellows Band from Washington.

William L. Smith, past noble grand of the lodge, presided.

What promises to be the most important meeting which the Arlington County Civic Federation has held in more than five years, or since it sponsored the movement which resulted in Arlington County passing a bond issue for more than $600,000, will be held tonight in the Lyon Park Community House when the delegates will consider the report of the legislation committee on a change in the form of county government.

The report, which has been in the hands of the delegates for the past few days, recommends the county manager form of government, with the election of five persons to constitute the county board.

From a general discusion, which has gone the rounds of the county, the sentiment appears to strongly favor the adoption of the report.

With work being rushed on the additions to the Washington-Lee High School, which comprises 32 classrooms, in addition to enlargements to four of the elementary schools, it is understood that the opening of the fall term will not be delayed longer than September 22. The county school board, at its meeting Wednesday night, will name the definite date of opening for the schools.

While it is learned that the construction work will in no way interfere with the classes, the school board still will be faced with the problem of finding room for all of the classes in both the high school and elementary schools.

With the adding of the 32 classrooms to the Washington-Lee High School, making a total of 57 classrooms, and with funds available to later add 10 more, the county will be able to boast of having the largest high school in the State, with the completion of the present additions.

Word reached Clarendon yesterday of the death of Mrs. Thomas R. Mechem, of Lyon Park, at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. C. Ritter, at Newport News.

Mrs. Mechem, who has been ill for the last eleven months, was 43 years old.

Besides her husband she is survived by two sisters, Mrs. W. C. Ritter, of Newport News, and Mrs. Thomas Chiers, of Edenton, N. C. Funeral announcements are to be made later.

The monthly meeting of the Arlnigton Volunteer Fire Department will be held tomorrow night at its new firehouse near Columbia pike. Vice President John A. Dawkins, of the Arlington-Fairfax Counties Volunteer Firemens Association, will present the 1929 attendance banner which the association has awarded to the local firemen.

A report will be presented by Chairman A. C. Scheffel on the results of the recent carnival. It was announced that the ladies' auxiliary will present to the fire department a purse of $100.

Declaring that gasoline filling stations are practically banned in "local business" areas as a result of the restrictions placed upon them under the zoning ordinance, Robert H. Forman, zoning administrative officer, announced yesterday that efforts will be made to have that section of the ordinance amended by the county board of supervisors.

Mr. Forman states that an amendment he considers will take care of the situation has been prepared by himself and County Engineer C. L. Kinnier, which will be presented to the supervisors for their consideration at an early date.

Daily O'Currences

By JOHN DALY

ON the way to the country, Luella's picnic party came to grief—caught in a traffic jam.

"Where on earth did all these cars come from?" she asked, impatient at the snail-like pace we maintained.

"Search me, the entire nation must be on this highway."

"What we ought-a do is get off the Main Stem," she exclaimed. "Where is this place we're going?"

"Oh, about 40 miles down the pike," I evaded, not knowing just where we were going, only that we were on the way.

"Forty miles more of this, and, and——"

"Get out and walk."

* * * *

SO it was decided that we'd get out of traffic, and guide the procession, the cars following us, down a side lane; a long, lovely road leading to nowhere in particular.

At the end of five miles or so we came to a fine grove, a rippling stream at the edge of a hillside.

"End of the line! All out!" shouted Luella, in high glee, and her merry band of picnickers parked their machines and followed us to the water's edge.

A grand place it was. Luella selected level ground for the festivities. "You men get out the baskets," she commanded. "We women'll fix the food."

Good old food. We were all hungry as bears, no breakfast to speak of; so the boys made short shrift of getting the baskets, the women-folk displaying the age-old art of arranging a picnic. Soon, nature's table was all dolled up with the cutest little paper napkins and plates.

"Now," said Luella, busy as a bird dog, "we'll spread the banquet."

* * * *

OUT of each basket came bottles of olives and potato chips.

Olives and potato chips. That was all.

If ever I see another olive I'll shoot it on sight.

"Where are the sandwiches?" I asked Luella, sotto voce.

"There aren't any," she murmured, downcast. "All I see are olives—and potato chips."

Olives and potato chips.

Seems that all the other poor duffers were like me. They, too, had left home without breakfast, in the hustle and bustle. They, too, had depended on somebody bringing something to eat besides olives—and potato chips.

Too late now. Here we were 50 miles from civilization.

"No cooperation! No organization," I complained, while Luella fled from the scene—probably to jump overboard in the creek. "No one knew what to bring and they all brought the same thing — olives and potato chips."

A fine picnic that turned out to be—and not a hot dog stand in miles.

Some day we ought-a all go for a boat ride.

Few changes have been made in the personnel of teachers. More than one-third of the county teachers attended summer schools at various colleges and universities.

Egg Contest Hens Increase Scores

Birds Are Nearly Back to Normal Production After Slump.

Special to The Washington Post.

College Park, Md., Sept. 1.—A further unseasonable increase took place in egg production during the forty-third week of the egg-laying contest being conducted by the University of Maryland Experiment Station, the thousand birds having turned out a total of 3,462 eggs during the seven days, or 49.45 per cent of a perfect score. This represents the fourth week that the production trend has been upward, and marks a return to normal after the great losses incurred during the extremely hot spell during the summer.

Leaders for the contest remain about the same. The pen of Mount Hope Farm, Williamstown, Mass., is first, with 2,261 eggs, and the ten birds belonging to L. R. Douglas, Kinsale, Va., is second, with 2,243 eggs. Third honors went to the entry of Jack Lynch, Mansfield Depot, Conn., with 2,214 eggs, and the fourth place holder is Hoch's Pedigree Breeding Farm, Williamstown, N. J., with 2,199 eggs. All four of the leading pens are of the leghorn variety.

Hen No. 1 in the pen of the Ehmann Poultry Farm, Allison Park, Pa., made a perfect score of seven eggs for the week and ran her total up to 267 eggs laid thus far in the contest. However, she is closely followed by bird No. 4 in the pen of the Wayside Poultry Farm, Elmont, Va., which now has a total of 264 eggs.

MINIATURE LINKS ARE HELD TAX FREE

Courses in Prince Georges Need No Licenses Unless Goods Are Sold.

VOTERS REGISTER TODAY

Business licenses will not have to be obtained by operators of miniature golf links in Prince Georges County, according to a decision received by Summerfield D. Hall, clerk of the circuirt court at Upper Marlboro from the State License Bureau.

This applies only to links where golf is the sole enterprise. Where cigars, cigarettes, candy and ice cream are sold, a regular trader's license must be obtained. It is expected that the next session of the State Legislature will provide for the taxation of miniature golf links. The decision follows a request by Mr. Hall for a ruling after he had received a number of inquiries on the subject.

Workers of both the Democratic and Republican parties in Prince Georges County used the Labor Day holiday to good advantage in lining up new voters to be registered today in the various polling places. The many country clubs of the county reported an especially heavy day on the golf links and in the fields of other sports.

Brooke Lee, county Democratic leader, and Dr. Benjamin C. Perry, retiring county commissioner, are named as sureties on the bond.

The bond is filed in accordance with the laws of Maryland which require such a bond under the corrupt practices act.

Man Whose Family Died in Fire Fined for Third Traffic Violation.

Moxley was fined a total of $100 Sunday by Commissioner Benson on charges of operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, leaving the scene of a collision without making known his identity and reckless driving.

New City Council Meets in Danville

Final Act of Old Body Was Acceptance of Bid for Utilities Plant.

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Sept. 1.—The new city council, elected last June, met here today for organization purposes. There are six members of the old council, the new members being W. E. Gardner, J. W. Yarbrough and G. F. Walton, all members of the council preceding the last one and who succeed M. D. Turner, W. P. Boatwright (who did not seek reelection) and W. R. Mitchell.

The last meeting of the old council was held Saturday night, at which felicitations were in order. Councilman W. P. Boatwright paid a glowing tribute to President E. B. Meade, who was presented with a silver loving cup. Mayor Harry Wooding also complimented the council on its constructive program.

The final work of the outgoing council was the acceptance on Friday night of a bid of $4,300,000 by the Western Power, Light & Telephone Co. for the city utilities plants. The council, however, left the question of the sale up to the voters in a referendum to be held on October 14.

THRONGS THRILLED AT CULPEPER FAIR

Broadcasting System Aids in Entertaining Crowds During Program.

JUMPER BREAKS LOOSE

Culpeper, Va., Sept. 1.—In spite of the long-continued drought in this section the Culpeper and adjoining counties fair opened today with exhibits and attendance about the same as in normal years.

The broadcasting system installed by the management this year did much to iron out the dead spots so typical of county fairs, by announcing events and between races and acts filling in with musical numbers. Miss Georgie Kelley gave an impromptu concert, which was carried to the crowd by loud speakers and made such a hit that she has been engaged by the management to furnish entertainment for the crowd on each of the remaining days of the fair.

The hog-calling contest, carrying a prize of $3, produced many weird noises among the contetsants and was won by M. Oldaker, with Oscar Coates and C. W. Obannon finishing second and third, respectively.

Salem School Winner.

Salem School won first prize for the best school booth, gaining $25 for the school thereby. Mitchell School was second, winning $20, and Brandy was given the third prize.

The races brought out the big crowd of the day, as usual, and in most cases were good with plenty of competition. A. S. Bowman's Major Finley took the first one, but had to step in the finish when Mrs. Waugh's Pride of Glenmore came through from behind for a close second.

Leo Mc, Card Party and Maryland Boy ran one, two, three, in the second and third race, a 1-mile free-for-all. Schley B., another Bowman entry, got in first, with White Foot running at his saddle.

Steeplechase Proves Thriller.

The four horses in the steeplechase broke together, but soon strung out, Paul Pry and Archie running together about a half a city block ahead of Radio and Jack Pryor, and it seemed that it would only be a race between the first two, but at the sixth jump, directly in front of the grand stand, Paul Pry ran wide and both he and Archie ran outside the wings.

Archie ran wild and went to the barns, but Paul Pry was steered back into line and managed to finish second to Radio, who, incidentally, gave the bookmakers a bad few minutes as he was marked up at good prices and was a favorite with the public because of past wins on this course.

The summary:

First race — Free-for-all; one-half mile. 1, Major Finley, A. S. Bowman; 2, Pride of Glenmore, Mrs. M. R. Waugh; 3, Frenzy-Woodside Stock Farm.

Leo Mc Wins Second Race.

Second race — Free-for-all; three-fourths mile. 1, Leo Mc, Mrs. S. B. Carter; 2, Card Party, R. G. Bruce; 3, Maryland Boy, H. M. Simpson.

Third race—Free-for-all; one mile. 1, Schley B, A. S. Bowman; 2, White Foot, H. R. Kearns; 3, George Jessle, Frank Bennett.

Fourth race — Steeplechase; about 2½ miles. 1, Radio, H. R. Kearns; 2, Paul Pry, D. C. Weaver; 3, Jack Pryor, C. R. Borst.

Heflin Is Chosen To Succeed Self

Alabama Senator Choice of 'Jeffersonian Democrats' at Convention.

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Senator J. Thomas Heflin was nominated to succeed himself and Hugh A. Locke, of Birmingham, and Dempsey Powell, of Greenville, were nominated as candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, respectively, in the November general election at a State-wide convention of independents or "Jeffersonian Democrats" here today.

The nominations were unanimously acted upon by the convention. The nominees will oppose the Democratic candidates nominated in the regular party primary August 12.

Heflin, Locke and Powell were barred from participating in the primary because of their failure to support the Democratic nominees in the 1928 presidential election.

SUPERVISORS PLAN SESSION TOMORROW

Flag Raising Will Be First Official Act at Meeting of Fairfax Group.

HARRISONS ARE FETED

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors will hold its regular monthly meeting tomorrow morning in the boardroom of the county courthouse. The first official act of the day will be the flag raising. A 40-foot metal flag pole has been erected in front of the courthouse in the center of the lawn. This will be the first time in many years that a flag will be flown over Fairfax courthouse.

A formal contract between the supervisors and the Federal Government will be drawn and signed during the day. This is in accordance with the agreement reached two weeks ago with St. Julian Wilson of the United States Bureau of Public Roads. This contract will permit the government's closing the county road at the entrance of the Mount Vernon estate and to use the right of way for landscaping. The county will use a new road that is to be built in accordance with the bureau's plans for the plaza of the George Washington Memorial boulevard. The title of the land will remain in the county but the easement contract will protect the government from any action by succeeding boards of supervisors. The contract is to include all county owned lands at or near the entrance to the estate.

The Fairfax Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will meet after a summer's vacation tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the home of Miss Abbie Woodard at Fairfax.

The Betsy Ross Council, Daughters of America, will hold its meeting this evening at the O. F. A. Hall on Railroad street in Vienna.

A large number of friends and relatives from this section of the country gathered yesterday evening in Herndon to assist Mr. and Mrs. George F. Harrison celebrate their golden wedding anniversary and Mrs. Harrison's sixty-ninth birthday.

Uncle George, as Mr. Harrison is affectionately called, is widely known throughout the State. From 1871 to 1881 he was a member of the Centerville district road commission and from 1881 until 1911 he served Fairfax County as the member of the county board of supervisors from Centerville magisterial district. In 1911 he sold his farm near Chantilly, on the Little River turnpike, and moved to the town of Herndon, in Dranesville district. There he was so well known and liked that in 1915 the citizens of that district elected him to serve them on the county board of supervisors, which he did until his retirement in 1928.

Uncle George is sometimes called the "father of the Fairfax County highway department" because while a member of the board of supervisors he fought for hard-surfaced and improved roads throughout the county. He was one of the founders of the Lee Highway Association and led the fight for a bond issue to build the road through the county. Another of his accomplishments is in getting the Little River turnpike from Alexandria to the Loudoun County line hard surfaced. He has been a member of the Virginia Good Roads Association since 1912 and served that body on the executive committee.

Any movement for the betterment of the county has always found Uncle George as one of the leaders. At present he is a director of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce and chairman of its highway committee. He is vice president of the Herndon Volunteer Fire Department, a director of the Fairfax County Firemens Association and this summer was appointed one of the three members of the county's tax equalization board to reassess all real estate in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison have resided in Fairfax County all their lives, their ancestors settling there in Colonial days. Mrs. Harrison was Miss Ida D. Ayre, of Centerville, and, like her husband, has always taken a great interest in county and civic affairs. The couple has no children but its home has always been the gathering place of the young people of the community.

The whole town of Herndon turned out for last night's celebration. The fire department and the Ladies Auxiliary staged a parade with the fire equipment in their honor. County officials were present. Letters, telegrams and presents from all parts of the country were piled high. The home was decorated with golden rod, yellow daisies and sunflowers. Uncle George, who is very active, declared last night that he felt as "young and spry" as he did the day he was married, and, to prove it, he offered to dance a jig with any one half his age.

Miss Sarah E. Thomas, Fairfax County home demonstration agent, will meet this morning with the 4-H Club at Bailey's Cross Roads, where she will give a demonstration on vegetables as food for health. In the afternoon she will visit members of the Poultry Club there and give a poultry culling demonstration.

Maryland Oyster Season Is Opened

Yield Expected to Be Best in Years; Virginia Crop Suffers.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 1 (A.P.).—With the yield expected to be among the best in years, both in quality and quantity, Chesapeake Bay oyster fishermen, idle since last spring, invaded rivers and coves today as the Maryland season opened. The season on the Potomac River, one of the largest fishing grounds, does not open until September 15, however.

The continued hot weather, which brought grief to inland residents, is expected to pay dividends to the oyster fishermen, as it advances the season and will assure full development of fat oysters according to Swepson Earle, State conservation commissioner.

Maryland has been more fortunate than Virginia, he said, as oyster beds in waters of that State have been harder hit by a blight.
